Subfund's risk profile

To better understand the fund's risk profile, investors are asked to supplement this risk level by a breakdown in risks inherent to the investment strategy described in the official prospectus. The fund's value can decline, due in particular to the following risks:

- Credit risk: the default or downgrade of an issuer can lead to losses for the fund. However this risk is limited in the fund by the requirement of at least one ratings agency.
- Interest-rate risk: fluctuations in interest rates can lead to losses by the fund. Our interest-rate specialists constantly monitor interest-rate markets, in order to benefit from any opportunity that might arise on these markets and avoid underlying risks.
- Liquidity risk: certain market events can prevent transactions, and this can lead to fund losses.
- Derivatives risk: the sophistication, volatility and leverage of derivatives could incur certain risks for the fund.
