Strategy Description and Objective

The Portfolio's investment objective is to replicate the performance of the Modified Strategy Goldman Sachs D266 on the Bloomberg Commodity Index Total Return which seeks to outperform the Bloomberg Commodity Index Total Return, while keeping the same weight for each commodity as of the yearly rebalancing. The Portfolio seeks to achieve its objective by (i) entering into a swap agreement for participation in the Modified Strategy Goldman Sachs D266 on the Bloomberg Commodity Index Total Return and (ii)(a) entering into a reverse repurchase agreement with a financial institution or (b) purchasing an asset portfolio of US Government Treasury Bills.

The Modified Strategy Goldman Sachs D266 on the Bloomberg Commodity Index Total Return seeks to outperform the Bloomberg Commodity Index Total Return by making certain adjustments to the methodology for calculating that index, in particular, the procedure by which certain of the constituent futures contracts are rolled forward, in order to apply certain dynamic, timing and seasonal rolling rules. These adjustments are intended to enhance the performance of the strategy over that of the index, but there can be no assurance that these adjustments will have the desired effect and it is possible that these adjustments could actually result in the strategy underperforming the index.

The index, the Bloomberg Commodity Index Total Return, is designed to provide investors with a diversified benchmark for the commodity markets and is currently composed of futures contracts on 24 physical commodities. The index, and therefore the strategy, is not exposed to each constituent commodity contract equally.

Monthly Commentary

The BCOMTR index was down -1.47% in February.

The Energy Sector (BCOMEN Index -0.84%) dipped in February, dragged lower by Natural Gas, despite outperformance in Crude and Products. Both Crude benchmarks rallied with Brent (BCOMCO Index +2.04%) futures settling at $83.62 per barrel, a $1.91 month-over-month increase, while WTI (BCOMCL Index +2.45%) futures ended at $78.26, up from $75.85. The month commenced with a sharp decline in crude prices, dropping over $2/bbl on February 1st, following a larger than expected increase in US crude inventories reported by the EIA. The EIA also highlighted a record-setting surge in US crude production for November, reaching 13.31mmbpd. Later that day, an erroneous tweet from Al Jazeera suggesting a ceasefire between Israel and Hamas caused crude futures to plummet from intraday highs, only to later clarify that peace talks were still ongoing. This confusion contributed to crude marking its most significant weekly drop since early November, with WTI and Brent down approximately $4 and $4.6 per barrel, respectively, for the week. OPEC's output reduction in January by 490kbbpd—to 26.5mmbpd—as part of its planned first-quarter cuts further influenced market sentiment. Notably, half of this production cut was attributed to Iraq and Kuwait, with another significant portion resulting from an unplanned disruption in Libya due to protests. By February 5th, the potential for a Middle East ceasefire had significantly reduced the geopolitical risk premium, leading to a near $6 per barrel decline in prompt crude prices from the previous week. However, the market found some support in the following days, with prompt crude futures trading over 50 cents higher, buoyed by news of another Houthi attack on a cargo ship in the Red Sea, underscoring the ongoing risks in the region. The upward trend continued into the following weeks, with crude futures gaining over 90 cents, reflecting stronger global physical crude markets and escalating conflicts in the Red Sea. This was after reports of US strikes against Houthi anti-ship cruise missiles and comments from the CEO of Maersk about the increasing danger of attacks in the area. Geopolitical risks heightened further, following reports that Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu dismissed a ceasefire proposal amidst continued Houthi aggression in the Red Sea. This development, alongside tighter global crude balance expectations, pushed the Mar24/Apr24 WTI prompt spread and the Apr24/May24 Brent prompt spread higher, reflecting tightening near-term global balance expectations. For the remainder of February, Brent prompt futures traded within a $3 range, supported by a strong economic backdrop in the US. Prompt crude prices remained in a tight band, with ongoing Middle East tensions and OPEC production cuts balancing out the effects of increased US production. In Products, Gasoline (BCOMRB Index +5.51%) was relatively strong throughout February due to weather-driven refinery outages in the US following the winter storm in January which resulted in notable stock draws. Positioning was near max short at the beginning of the month and has reverted back to 5-year averages. More broadly across the products complex, Red Sea tensions have remained top of mind and kept the complex well supported despite with Heating Oil (BCOMHO Index -1.07%) finishing slightly lower and Gasoil (BCOMGO Index +0.09%) broadly unchanged. Natural Gas (BCOMNG Index, -10.86%) continued to fall on the basis of warm weather and strong production. NG opened the month close to flat, finding some support from forecasts showing seasonally cold weather for the middle of February. However, by mid-month, there was a possibility that we were on track for the warmest February on record. Production looked robust and despite the fact it seemed that shut-ins would be required to solve for summer balances, we saw rigs being added in Haynesville & Appalachia. Continued warm weather hurt flat price, which sold off 9 days in a row. On Feb 20th, the market saw partial recovery on the back of Chesapeake's production cut announcement. The firm announced a 0.8 BCF/d cut vs 2023 production levels, and after a parade of bearish weather runs and stubbornly high production created a bounce-back.

The Precious Metals sector In the Precious space, Gold (BCOMGC Index -0.61%) finished the month lower and Silver (BCOMSI Index -2.16%), as rate cut expectations were delayed and the dollar strengthened, however physical demand drivers remained supportive and therefore limiting downside. One of the key supportive factors is strong Central Bank purchases owing to high geopolitical tensions and reserve diversification. For example, at the start of February, Poland's Central Bank announced its decision to increase gold holdings to 20% of total reserve holdings (vs 12.3% previously) owing to gold's safe-haven qualities.

The Industrial Metals sector on Industrial Metals (BCOMIN Index -0.98%), the start of the month saw a sell-off across the space. February began with poor onshore sentiment, with Chinese equities dropping, due to 'snowball' kick-ins and margin calls. Developer pre-sales numbers released in Feb also made new lows, which added to downward pressure on the complex. Mid-month saw sideways price-action during Chinese New Year, with prices initially falling before being pulled back by the arb into China upon its re-opening. Aluminium (BCOMAL Index -2.92%) and Nickel (BCOMNI Index +9.52%) saw a significant intra-month rallies on the announcement of further Russian sanctions from the US, but Aluminium's rally was faded once it became clear that it would not be affected by these sanctions. Nickel, however, held these gains as it was supported by several production cut announcements from Western countries, ending the month up. Following Chinese New Year, Copper (BCOMHG Index -2.09%) rose on basis of potential production cuts in China, short covering and continued supply disruptions, but we will need to see signs of improving western or Chinese demand to break higher (despite constricted supply & tight copper concentrate inventories). Zinc (BCOMZS Index -4.67%) crept higher towards the end of the month as it found support from the cost curve but ended down for the month, along with Lead (BCOMPBL Index -5.14%).

The Agricultural Sector (BCOMAG Index -4.76%) was the largest negative contributor to the benchmark's performance, on the back of sliding Corn and Wheat prices as well as a lower Soy complex. Corn (BCOMCN Index -6.82%) slid to its lowest level since 2020, briefly breaking below $4/bushel before bouncing back. Corn prices have been under pressure for several months amid bumper Brazilian and Argentinian harvests, following the highest ever corn production in the US last year. Wheat (BCOMWH Index -3.69%) declined in February on the back of cheaper Russian supplies and lacklustre demand for American grain. Shipments from Russia, the world's top exporter, were seen to reach a record in February. Soybeans (BCOMSY Index -7.16%) finished lower, the third month in a row, on bumper South American production and tepid Chinese demand, the world's biggest importer. Sugar (BCOMSB Index -7.33%) dipped in February amid strong Brazilian exports and beneficial rains, easing draught concerns. Coffee (BCOMKC Index -2.99%) dipped, pausing its rally, amid a boost in coffee bags awaiting grading by the ICE Exchange, easing concerns of tightness in stockpiles. Cotton (BCOMCT +16.09%) continued climbing, as data showed declining stockpiles in the US and a strong pace in export sales.

The Livestock Sector (BCOMLI Index +2.41%) rallied amid culling of herds in China and the US despite a slump in feed grains. Both Lean Hogs (BCOMLH Index +2.12%) and Live Cattle (BCOMLC Index +2.57%) jumped.

The Collateral return contributed 0.42% for the month of February.

The Enhanced Strategy outperformed the benchmark by +0.65% in February. The main source of outperformance was Natural Gas (+0.67%). The Enhanced strategy does a seasonal roll on Natural Gas and was invested further out on the curve in the Jan25 while the benchmark was invested in the May24 contract. Hence, the Enhanced strategy suffered less than the benchmark from the drop in prices during the month amid the warm weather and strong production.

Risk Disclosures

Conflict of interests: Goldman Sachs performs several roles in connection with the Portfolio. Although Goldman Sachs will perform its obligations in good faith and a commercially reasonable manner, Goldman Sachs may face conflicts between those roles and its own interests.

Counterparty risk: The ability of the Portfolio to meet its obligations to investors will depend on the receipt by it of payments owed to the Portfolio by Goldman Sachs International under the Swap Agreement and the Reverse Repurchase Agreement. As a result, the Portfolio will be exposed to the creditworthiness of Goldman Sachs International.

Not principal protected: The Shares in the Portfolio are not principal protected and hence investors can potentially lose the full notional of investment.

No assurance of source of value: Although the Modified Strategy Goldman Sachs D266 on the Bloomberg Commodity Index Total Return (the "Underlyer Strategy") is designed to capture certain fundamental commodity relationships, the relationships may or may not exist.

No active management: There will be no active management of the Underlyer Strategy so as to enhance returns beyond those embedded in the modifications to the Bloomberg Commodity Index Total Return (the "Benchmark Index").

Potentially different returns from those of the Benchmark Index: Although the Underlyer Strategy includes the same futures contracts that comprise the Benchmark Index, its value and returns will likely differ from those of the Benchmark Index.

No assurance of "absolute" returns: There can be no assurance that the Underlyer Strategy to which the Portfolio is linked will actually be successful at producing consistently positive returns, nor does Goldman Sachs make any representation or warranty, express or implied, that the Underlyer Strategy will do so in the future.

Limit prices could impact liquidity in the Underlyer Strategy: The commodity markets can be subject to temporary distortions due to regulations that limit the amount of fluctuation in futures contract prices which may occur during a single trading day. Limit prices may have the effect of precluding trading in a particular contract or forcing liquidation of contracts underlying the Underlyer Strategy at disadvantageous times or prices. These circumstances could prevent an investor from redeeming their Shares in the Portfolio in full on a given day which could in turn adversely affect the return on Shares in the Portfolio for potential or existing investors.

Unpredictable changes in commodity contracts prices: Prices of commodity futures contracts and other commodity contracts included in the Underlyer Strategy are affected by a variety of factors which are unpredictable and beyond the control of Goldman Sachs and the Investment Manager.

Higher future prices of commodities included in the Underlyer Strategy relative to their current prices may adversely affect the value of the Shares in the Portfolio: The Underlyer Strategy replicates an actual investment in commodity contracts and therefore is affected by the need to "roll" the commodity contracts underlying the Underlyer Strategy due to commodity contracts having a predetermined expiration date on which trading in the contract ceases. "Rolling" (that is selling contracts that are nearing expiration before they expire and buying contracts that have an expiration date further in the future), while allowing an investor to maintain an investment position in the commodities underlying the Underlyer Strategy without receiving physical delivery of commodities or making or receiving a cash settlement, can potentially have a large impact on the level of the Underlyer Strategy. In particular, if the price of the contracts being sold is higher than that of the contracts being purchased (a situation known as "contango") and spot prices remain unchanged, this could result in negative performance of the Underlyer Strategy which could in turn affect the value of the Shares in the Portfolio.

No entitlement to the underlying commodity: Investing in the Portfolio will not make a holder entitled to physical delivery of any of the commodities included in the Underlyer Strategy or any contracts with respect thereto."
