Manager Comment

HIGHLIGHTS

- The Goldilocks economic scenario remained in place in September, although reflation trades resurfaced in the markets
- It was a strong month for European and Japanese equities, US small caps, and banks as the US dollar bottomed out and global rates moved higher
- The fund rose in value, with positive performance from its equity holdings and duration hedging more than offsetting losses from the bond allocation
- The managers further reduced the fund's duration and increased the net equity allocation

MARKET REVIEW

The economic backdrop remains favourable, but with inflation now probably bottoming out, President Trump's (reduced) promises back on the table and the Fed signalling its intention to go ahead with monetary policy normalisation, reflation trades resurfaced in the markets last month. European and Japanese equities, US small caps, and banks were the main beneficiaries, rising by between 3% and 6%. Emerging equities underperformed, the US dollar bottomed out and global rates moved higher (US Treasuries +21bp, Bunds +10bp). Credit, especially high yield, continued to outperform rates.

FUND REVIEW

The fund rose in value in September. Within equities its exposure to US small caps and US banks and its overweights in Europe and Japan boosted its return, as did its duration hedging (short bond futures and put options). These effects more than offset losses incurred on its bond holdings. The fund's allocation to cash bonds fell marginally (-1% to 69%) as the managers sold some direct holdings in subordinated bonds (-1%) and core and peripheral duration (-2%), while adding linkers (+1% to 4%). At the end of the month, as reflation trades gained momentum, they further reduced overall duration from 3.2 to 2.9 years through a 5% short position on French ten-year OAT futures. The fund's net equities allocation rose from 18% to 21% as the managers increased their exposure to Eurozone and Japanese equities using futures and, to a lesser extent mechanically, as the delta of the put options tended towards 0. They added Eni to the undervalued stocks allocation. In the special opportunities allocation, the managers sold a yielding structured product on US autos that has risen by 4% in four months and trimmed the allocation to alternative strategies. The cash allocation was kept at 5%. The one-month VaR 95% remained fairly stable around 1.4 over the month.

OUTLOOK

The managers expect more of the same in terms of the economic and financial backdrop over the next few months. As economic expansions or bull market phases have never yet died of old age, it is still (much?) too early to worry.. While they don't believe that inflation will roar back, they acknowledge investors' concerns as a return of inflation could disrupt the favourable economic backdrop by forcing central banks to hike much faster than expected and thus create a volatility shock in the financial markets. The threat of inflation, real or false, is probably the biggest risk in the foreseeable future.
