Past performance is no guarantee of future performance.

The value of an investment and the income from it can fall as well as rise as a result of market and currency fluctuations and you may not get back the amount originally invested. The annual management charge is deducted from the capital of the Fund. This will increase the income from the Fund but may constrain or erode potential for capital growth. We recommend that you read the Prospectus and Key Investor Information Document available from the address overleaf or from our website.

Fund manager's commentary

- Although the news flow could hardly be described as positive, global markets performed well in April.
- The Fund underperformed its benchmark in April with much of the damage coming from not owning Softbank.
- A few of our companies have already announced results with Shinetsu, a manufacturer of semiconductor silicon, producing strong numbers.

Investment background

Although the news flow could hardly be described as positive, global markets performed well in April. It was a month of records. The consumer sentiment index posted its biggest ever fall. Machine tool orders fell by a record 41%. And the Japanese government announced its biggest ever fiscal stimulus package, which, at ¥108 trillion, is equivalent to 20% of GDP and includes a ¥100,000 cash payment to every Japanese citizen.

Although Japan is now under a state of emergency, the government has no authority to compel citizens to stay at home, or businesses to close. Many shops and restaurants remain open (albeit closing earlier than normal). This might sound reckless, however, since recording its first case of the virus in mid-January, Japan has suffered just 432 Covid-19-related deaths.

To date, 31 of the companies in the Topix 100 index have reported their earnings numbers. Of these, only 14 have felt able to give forecasts for the current year. More (18) have given dividend guidance. Of which just one will lower dividends this year.

Fund review

The Fund underperformed its benchmark in April. Much of the damage came from not owning Softbank, which accounts for just under 3% of the index and rose by over 20% during the month. We have listed our concerns about Softbank, Mr Son and the Vision Fund too many times in the past to repeat them again. Suffice to say that we do not believe that Softbank is investible.

A few of our companies have already announced results. Shinetsu, a manufacturer of semiconductor silicon, produced strong numbers. Semiconductor demand remains robust, driven by higher data centre utilisation and 5G investment. Sekisui Chemical, an industrial conglomerate, which as well as being a housebuilder, makes specialty glass and infrastructure-related products such as railway sleepers, announced solid results, a dividend increase for the 11th consecutive year and a share buyback. It is interesting to note that the conglomerate structure, often subject to criticism from foreign investors, means that companies such as Sekisui, which derive their profits from a variety of businesses, are proving to be relatively defensive.

The (admittedly limited) results announcements to date suggest that Japanese companies' strong balance sheets are proving to be an asset in this crisis, as dividend cuts look to be modest. Price to book multiples are back to 50 year lows. As usual, foreign investors have reacted to a global crisis by reducing their Japanese exposure. The four most dangerous words in investment are said to be "this time is different". But perhaps this time it is.
