I Introduction

Fidelity Funds (the "Company") is an open-ended investment company established in Luxembourg as a société d'investissement à capital variable ("SICAV"). It has an umbrella structure and its assets are held in a number of different funds ("sub-funds"). Each sub-fund is a separate portfolio of securities and other assets managed in accordance with specific investment objectives. Separate classes of shares in the Company (the "Shares") are issued in relation to the sub-funds. Each sub-fund provides an investment opportunity in professionally managed pools of securities in different geographical areas and currencies, with the investment objective of capital growth, income or a balance between capital growth and income.

Shares are authorised for sale in a number of jurisdictions and may be listed on the Luxembourg Stock Exchange's Euro MTF market. However, shares in the Reserved Funds and the Institutional Reserved Funds are not presently listed. Further information on the stock exchange listings can be found on https://www.bourse.lu/official_list or may be obtained from the Management Company upon request.

II Financial Statements

The Board of Directors of the Company (the "Board") submits its report and the audited financial statements for the year ended 30 April 2022. The audited financial statements are set out on pages 154 to 849 of this Annual Report, with results for the year appearing in the Statement of Operations and Changes in Net Assets on pages 738 to 765. Dividend information for the sub-funds is detailed on pages 812 to 837.

A copy of the Annual Report can be found at the following web address: <https://statutory.fidelityinternational.com/fidelity-funds-annual-reports/>. A hard copy of the Annual Report may be obtained upon request from either the offices of the companies registered as distributors or from the Registered Office of the Company.

Comparative figures for the previous year can be found in the Annual Report of the Company for the year ended 30 April 2021.

III Activities during the year

During the year, the company followed the normal activities of an open-ended investment company. The Investment Manager's Report that follows gives an overview of performance. As at 30 April 2022, the number of registered Shareholders worldwide totalled in excess of 11,616. However, the total number of investors in the Company is much greater than the number of registered Shareholders due to the fact that certain registered Shareholders may represent the holdings of many underlying clients. Assets under management as at 30 April 2022 exceeded USD 146 billion.

The Directors may from time to time close sub-funds as well as launch further sub-funds with different investment objectives, subject to the approval of the Commission de Surveillance du Secteur Financier ("CSSF").

At the year end, the Company consisted of 136 active sub-funds.

Details of changes to the range of sub-funds during the year are provided in the Notes to the Financial Statements on pages 796 to 849.

Russia/Ukraine Conflict

The consequences of Russia's invasion of Ukraine in February 2022 were significant areas of focus for the management company towards the end of the financial year and continues to be so. Exposures to Russia and Ukraine and any liquidity and valuation related issues for all associated holdings have been closely monitored and all applicable sanctions have been followed.

As referenced in the Notes to the Financial Statements, the Fund's exposure to Russia and Ukraine was relatively low, with only one sub-Fund, Fidelity Funds - Emerging Europe, Middle East and Africa Fund, that had exposure in excess of 10% of total net assets.

With price discovery on Russian securities becoming increasingly difficult, a price discount of 50% was applied on 28 February 2022. On 2 March 2022 it was no longer possible to transact in local securities and valuations were further reduced to nil as a result. Consideration was given to whether it was appropriate and in the best interests of shareholders to suspend the calculation of the NAV. However, due to the Fund's low exposure to Russia and Ukraine it was not believed that such a suspension would be in the best interests of shareholders.

Given the seriousness of the events, Fidelity International decided that it would not be investing in Russia and Belarus for the foreseeable future. As such, a firm-wide prohibition has been implemented on new or additional purchases of Russian and Belarusian securities. Existing exposures have been addressed and where possible or appropriate, options to reduce it in a thoughtful way which protects the interests of shareholders and mitigates unintended consequences have been considered.

The Board of Directors of the Company (the "Board") has been kept duly and appropriately informed of all matters relating to the impact of the Russia/Ukraine crisis on the Company and the steps that were being taken to ensure that the interests of shareholders remain a priority.

COVID-19 Pandemic

As reported previously, from January 2020, due to the COVID-19 pandemic situation, global financial markets have experienced significant volatility. This has resulted in severe disruptions in the supply chain, travel and border restrictions, a fall in consumer demand and general market uncertainty. The FIL Limited Group ("FIL", "FIL International" or "Fidelity") business contingency plans have been activated gradually across all FIL International locations since the beginning of 2020. These measures have remained in place as required, including, amongst other things, remote access to enable FIL Group employees to work from home where this is considered necessary.

Despite these exceptional circumstances, throughout the crisis, Fund-related controls have remained unchanged and continue to run. No significant operational problems or performance issues or system outage have been identified to date.

The Board of Directors of the Company (the "Board") has been kept duly and appropriately informed of matters relating to the impact of COVID-19 on the Company and the steps being taken to ensure that the interests of shareholders remain a priority.

IV Board of Directors

The Directors of the Company as at 30 April 2022 are listed on page 6. Five of the seven Directors serving as at 30 April 2022 are considered non-executive Directors, two of whom are considered by the Board to be independent of the Investment Manager and free from any other relationship which could materially interfere with the exercise of their independent judgment.

There have been the following changes to the Board of Directors of the Fund during the year to 30 April 2022:

- Ms Abby Johnson resigned with effect from 15 February 2022.

Ms Johnson took the decision to step down from the Fund Board as it had becoming increasingly challenging during the COVID crisis for her to dedicate sufficient time to her role as a Director of the Fund. As this created a vacant seat on the Board, the Board considered and approved the appointment of Mr Jeffrey Lagarce to co-opt this seat, with effect from receipt of confirmation of no objection from the CSSF dated 8 July 2022.

During the year ended 30 April 2022, the Board has taken the decision to disband its Audit and Risk Committee ("ARC"), with its last meeting being held in July 2021. Taking into account matters such as the composition and size of the Board, the Board agreed that there were benefits to be gained from the full Board being involved in the matters previously considered by the ARC.

V Management of the Company

FIMLUX as the Management Company is responsible for the investment management, administration and distribution functions of the Company. FIMLUX may delegate part or all of such functions to third parties, subject to overall control and supervision. With the consent of the Company, FIMLUX has delegated the investment management function to FIL Fund Management Limited ("FFML") and the distribution function to FIL Distributors ("FID").

FIMLUX provides services to the Company in connection with keeping the Company's accounts, determination of the Net Asset Value of shares in each sub-fund on each Valuation Date and dispatch of dividend payments.

FIMLUX is responsible for the production of the Annual Report and Accounts of the Company for each financial year, which are required under general principles to give a true and fair view of the state of affairs of the Company. In accordance with those same principles, FIMLUX is responsible for:

- selecting suitable accounting policies and applying them consistently;
- preparing the Annual Report and Accounts on a going concern basis;
- maintaining proper accounting records which disclose at any time the financial position of the Company; and
- complying with both the Luxembourg Law of 10 August 1915 on commercial companies, as amended, and the Luxembourg Law of 17 December 2010, as amended, on undertakings for collective investment.

There has been the following change to the Board of Directors of FIL Investment Management (Luxembourg) S.A. (the "Management Company") during the year to 30 April 2022:

- Mr Dominic Rossi resigned with effect from 13 January 2022.
- Mr Romain Boscher and Ms Sera Sadretin Perry have been appointed to the Board with effect from the confirmation of no objection from the CSSF dated 11 July 2022.

Conducting Officers

As at 30 April 2022 the Conducting Officers (COs) appointed by FIMLUX were as listed on page 6.

Conducting Officers' Responsibilities

The COs have a duty to ensure that the tasks delegated to FFML and to FID as well as the administrative functions carried out by the Management Company are performed in compliance with Luxembourg Law, the Company's Articles of Incorporation and the current Prospectus. Amongst other things, the COs ensure compliance with the investment restrictions of the Company and oversee the implementation of the investment policy of each sub-fund by the appointed Investment Manager.

The Management Company and/or the COs report to the Board on a quarterly basis and the COs inform the Management Company and the Board without delay of any materially adverse matters resulting from the actions of the Investment Manager, the General Distributor or of the Management Company in relation to the administrative functions.

VI Role of Investment Manager and Central Administrative Agent

FFML provides day-to-day investment management to the Company, under the supervision and subject to the control of the Board and FIMLUX. FFML is authorised to act on behalf of the Company and to select agents, brokers and dealers through whom to execute transactions and is required to provide the Board and FIMLUX with any reports it may require.

FFML may receive investment advice from, and act upon the advice of, any company within the holding company FIL Limited ("FIL"), including affiliate companies of FFML, and may execute, transact and otherwise carry out its functions, duties and obligations with or through any of these Fidelity companies. FFML remains responsible for the proper performance by such companies of those responsibilities.

The duties of the Investment Manager include the design, implementation and maintenance of controls and procedures to administer the assets of the Company and to manage its affairs properly. The process extends to operational and compliance controls and risk management. In addition, the Company and FIMLUX have appointed FIL to provide services in relation to the investments of the sub-funds including valuation, statistical, technical, reporting and other assistance.

VII Corporate Governance

The Board applies a clear and transparent corporate governance framework for the management of the Company's affairs.

1. The Board has adopted the principles of good governance as set out in the ALFI (Association of the Luxembourg Fund Industry) Code of Conduct issued in June 2013 and considers that the Company has been in compliance with it in all material respects throughout the financial year ended 30 April 2022.
2. There are contractual arrangements in place governing the relationships with FIMLUX, FFML, FID and FIL as well as other third party suppliers to the Company.
3. The Directors take decisions in the interests of the Company and its Shareholders and refrain from taking part in any deliberation or decision which creates conflict between their personal interests and those of the Company and its Shareholders.
4. The Board meets at least four times a year. The Board requests and receives reports from the COs, FIMLUX, FFML, and FID on the various activities including compliance controls and risk management undertaken by the relevant FIL companies. Senior representatives of FIMLUX, FFML and FID attend meetings by invitation, thus enabling the Board of Directors to question the reports presented to it.
5. As part of the control framework within FIL, all FIL group employees are subject to the FIL Code of Conduct and its associated policies, which, amongst other things, set out procedures for personal account dealing in securities. The Board receives regular reports from the FIL Ethics Office on Employee Personal Trading to ensure that any conflicts of interest between personal accounts dealing by FIL group staff and the interests of the Company are properly managed.
6. The nomination of new Directors is considered by the Board and is subject to the approval of the CSSF and ultimately the approval of Shareholders at the Annual General Meeting. The level of Directors' fees is put to Shareholders for approval, in accordance with the Articles of Incorporation. Directors who are employed by FIL or its subsidiaries, its holding company FIL, or its subsidiaries have waived their fees for the year ended 30 April 2022. For those Directors that have not waived their fees, the remuneration earned for the year ended 30 April 2022 was in aggregate USD 352,992 subject to Shareholder approval, as set out on page 807 of this Annual Report. For comparison purposes the EUR equivalent was EUR 307,059.
7. The Directors are committed to ensuring that Shareholders are kept informed of matters relevant to their investment and that all Shareholders are treated fairly. The maintenance and integrity of information concerning the Company on the Fidelity website is the responsibility of FIL. FIMLUX is responsible for the accuracy of translations of documents which may be available to investors in languages other than English. The Directors consider and, if thought fit, approve the English form of the financial statements presented to them at the relevant Board meetings.

VIII Other Information

Proxy Voting

FFML has a policy of voting on equity securities where it is possible to do so, unless the loss of liquidity as a result of attendant share blocking is deemed to outweigh the expected benefits to be gained. Such voting is undertaken in accordance with written proxy voting guidelines employed by the FIL group, of which FFML is a part, and takes account of prevailing local market best practices. The Board of the Management Company reviews and adopts the proxy voting policy, activity and guidelines annually. FIL's Principles of Ownership, which summarises how FIL engages with companies in which the Company's sub-funds have invested, can be accessed from the Corporate Governance section of FIL's website (<https://www.fidelityinternational.com>).

Commissions and Internal crossing

FFML uses supplemental research in the course of its work for the Company and other clients provided by brokers through whom the Investment Manager executes transactions for the Company and other clients. All dealing commission paid by the Company and other clients on trades with brokers account only for the costs of executing the trade. All supplemental research used by the Investment Manager is valued and paid for separately from execution and other relationships with brokers in accordance with inducement regulations.

The Company participates in the Investment Manager's interfunding programme whereby FIL's traders, on occasion, identify situations where an account or sub-fund managed by FIL is buying the same security that another account or sub-fund is selling. If a trader can confirm that it would be in the interests of both accounts to execute a transaction between them rather than in the market then an interfund transaction is executed. These transactions amounted to USD 410,478,579 during the year under review.

Swiss investors

Swiss investors are advised that with the exception of Asian Equity Fund, Asia Pacific Multi Asset Growth & Income Fund, Greater China Fund II, Greater China Multi Asset growth & Income Fund, Institutional European Larger Companies Fund, Institutional US High Yield Fund, Multi Asset Target Income 2024 Fund, the Institutional Target Funds, the present sub-funds of the Company have been authorised by the Swiss Financial Market Supervisory Authority for distribution in Switzerland.

IX Business of the Annual General Meeting

The Board of Directors is proposing the following resolutions be put to the Shareholders at the Annual General Meeting of the Company to be held on 6 October 2022 at noon:

- the presentation of the Report of the Board of Directors;
- the presentation of the Audit Report;
- the approval of the Statement of Net Assets and Statement of Operations and Changes in Net Assets for the year ended 30 April 2022;
- the discharge of the Board of Directors;
- the election/re-election of the Directors;
- the approval of the payment of Directors' fees;
- the election of the external Auditor;
- the approval of the payment of dividends; and
- consideration of such other business that may properly come before the Annual General Meeting under the Articles of Incorporation.

Equity Markets

Global equities fell over the review period. The emergence of more infectious variants of COVID-19 as well as a resurgence in infections held back gains earlier in the period. Meanwhile, tightening monetary policies in view of elevated inflation and geopolitical tensions amid Russia's attack on Ukraine weighed on markets in the latter part of the period. Western countries imposed sanctions against Russia following the invasion. The subsequent disruptions resulting from the conflict pushed commodity prices to extreme levels, exacerbating concerns around soaring inflation and leaving central banks with few options but to tighten their monetary policies towards the end of the period. Moreover, China recently adopted a stringent zero-COVID-19 policy to control a fresh resurgence of COVID-19, which hurt sentiment. Nevertheless, stock prices were supported by the economic reopening and recovery themes. Encouraging corporate earnings in developed markets, coupled with progress on the roll-out of COVID-19 vaccines globally, further lifted investor sentiment.

Against this global backdrop, the UK outperformed other regional markets. From a sector perspective, energy companies rose as crude oil prices surged amid fears that the Russia-Ukraine conflict could disrupt energy supplies. Consumer staples, utilities and health care were also among the leading performers, while communication services and consumer discretionary names led the decliners.

European markets declined over the period. Rising concerns around inflation, higher bond yields, supply chain bottlenecks and the impact of the Omicron variant of COVID-19 weighed on sentiment. Markets recovered in the second half of 2021, driven by strong quarterly earnings and increasing optimism over an economic recovery, but declined at the start of 2022 amid escalating geopolitical risks given rising tensions between Russia and Ukraine. Risk aversion rose amid expectations that the European Central Bank (ECB) would follow the US Federal Reserve (Fed) and raise interest rates to combat surging inflationary pressures.

UK equities posted strong returns. Investor sentiment remained buoyant for the most part, propelled by a spate of merger and acquisition activity, alongside expectations for continued earnings strength. However, the emergence of the Delta variant of COVID-19 kept markets in check, as fresh lockdowns were introduced in the country. While the monetary policy was set to remain accommodative, a combination of persistent supply chain bottlenecks and rising fuel costs led to concerns around longer lasting inflationary risks. With inflationary concerns persisting into the fourth quarter, most central banks appeared poised to 'ease off the gas'. The Bank of England (BoE) raised interest rates three times to 0.75% in March 2022. However, 2022 saw market volatility return, reflecting a reappraisal of interest rate expectations and Russia's invasion of Ukraine. In this environment, energy stocks led the gainers, benefiting from a recovery in demand and tight supply. Meanwhile, the sectors seen as the most susceptible to rising costs/rates, such as consumer discretionary and technology, were among the worst performers.

US equities declined over the period. Markets were firmly in recovery mode in the second quarter of 2021, fuelled by record levels of stimulus and progress in the rollout of COVID-19 vaccines. Corporate results across a broad range of sectors also kept investor confidence high. However, the Omicron variant of COVID-19 somewhat diminished sentiment in the fourth quarter of 2021. Subsequently, equities declined sharply in the first quarter of 2022 following the Russian invasion of Ukraine and the US Fed's 0.25 percentage point interest rate hike. The Fed indicated that it may raise interest rates at a faster pace to combat persistently high inflation. First quarter GDP declined by 1.4% on an annualised basis, which weighed on investor sentiment. Most sectors gained, with energy, and consumer staples advancing the most.

Japanese equities fell over the 12-month period. Concerns over Russia's invasion of Ukraine, its spill over effect on the global economy and broadening inflationary risks, as well as increasing interest rates weighed on stock prices in the second half of the period. Sentiment was also hit by fears about the damage that the Omicron variant of COVID-19 could inflict on the economy. Earlier in the period, share price gains were supported by strong earnings momentum and domestic political developments, while rising vaccination rates lifted investor sentiment. Earnings results were favourable, generally coming in ahead of expectations, and the market reacted positively to companies that announced upward revisions and increased dividends. Meanwhile, the yen weakened against the US dollar, benefiting export-oriented companies. At a sector level, energy and financials were the leading gainers. Conversely, communication services and consumer discretionary names were the weakest performers.

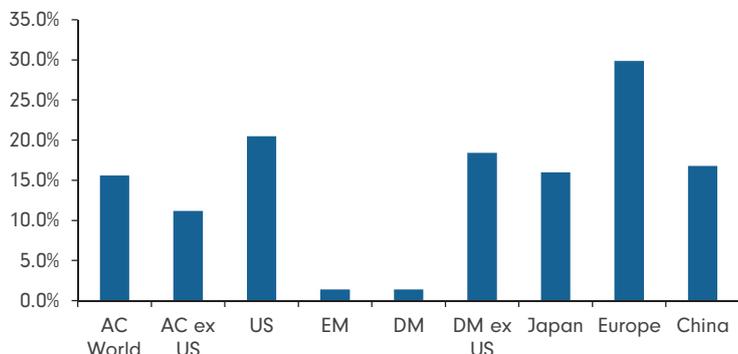

Pacific ex Japan equities ended the period lower. Investors were cautious amid uncertainty around the COVID-19 situation, an earlier than expected increase in interest rates by the US Fed, rising inflation and, more recently, concerns surrounding the Russia-Ukraine conflict and its spill over effect on global markets. A resurgence of COVID-19 cases and the slowdown of consumption in China also weighed on sentiment. Against this backdrop, most countries in the region ended the period lower. Encouragingly, Australian equities were relatively resilient. Policy support by Australian authorities and a pick-up in the pace of vaccination supported these stocks. From a sector perspective in the region, information technology (IT) was one of the key laggards, in-line with its global peers. The communication services and consumer discretionary sectors also declined. Encouragingly, commodity-led sectors such as energy and materials led gains.

Emerging market equities fell during the period. Markets were highly volatile due a number of factors, including the war in the Ukraine, China's regulatory crackdown, high global inflation and tighter financial conditions as the US Fed adopted a more aggressive stance. In early 2022, COVID-19 triggered lockdowns in China rattled investors given the perceived implications for both domestic and global economies. Russia's invasion of Ukraine drove inflation higher as commodity prices surged. From a style perspective, value names outperformed their growth and quality counterparts, though all of these stocks ended lower.

*The information stated in this report is historical and not necessarily indicative of future performance.

Earnings expectations remain positive but outlook has moderated

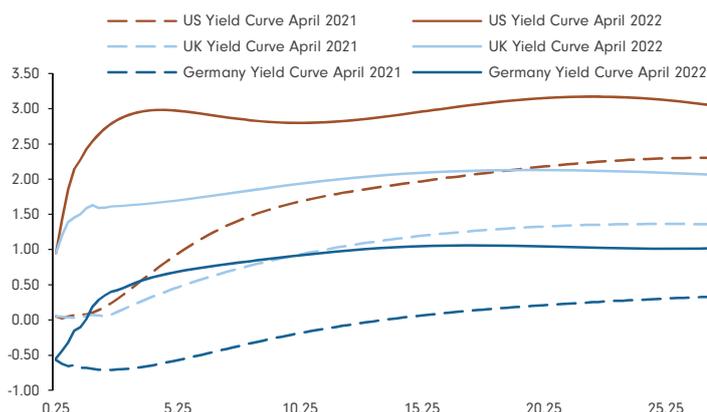

Source: IBES, Refinitiv DataStream, 30.04.2022
Data for MSCI Indices

We believe consumers have solid balance sheets and labour has strong bargaining power even if real incomes are being squeezed in the short term. Supply chain issues should ease (albeit later than expected) in the coming months, potentially leading to a rebound in Purchasing Managers' Indices (PMI). Regardless, market direction is likely to be determined by monetary conditions and the outlook here is not encouraging. While earnings expectations remain generally positive, medium-term conditions for corporate profitability are less favourable. Companies are being forced to absorb cost increases or are lagging in their efforts to pass them on to consumers, as evidenced by the increasing number of negative pre-announcements this earnings season. With two-year US rates now at close to 3%, a level that we think the Fed will struggle to reach, and less certainty over corporate profitability, which remains at record high levels, we believe it is prudent to focus even more on fundamentals.

Bond markets

Fixed income markets posted negative returns over the period, amid increasing monetary policy concerns and persistent inflation dynamics. Sovereign yields, including US Treasury, German bund and UK government bond (Gilts) yields rose to multi-year highs and yield curves flattened as investors were increasingly concerned about the impact of tighter monetary policies on global growth prospects. Meanwhile, corporate bonds posted negative returns as credit spreads widened and investment grade bonds faced additional headwinds of rising sovereign bond yields. Gains from an improvement in the growth outlook, rising COVID-19 vaccinations and strong corporate earnings were offset by rising volatility related to China's property sector, supply chain constraints, the emergence of the Omicron variant of COVID-19 and Russia's invasion of Ukraine.

Yield curves flattened:

Source: ICE BofA Merrill Lynch, 30.04.2022

Global central banks have turned incrementally hawkish and look set to embark on a much more aggressive tightening cycle to rein in inflation, which has touched multi-decade highs in the US, UK and eurozone. Concerns around intensifying stagflationary dynamics have come to the fore, as high inflation and growth concerns stemming from a consumer squeeze and tighter financial conditions have been further exacerbated by the war in Ukraine. With the US Fed now raising interest rates aggressively and in light of its soon-to-commence balance sheet reduction, we believe yields are fast approaching their highest levels as markets have already priced in significantly tighter monetary policy. In Europe, the ECB is likely to follow the US Fed, albeit in a less aggressive fashion, and despite the ongoing concerns from the war in Ukraine. Elsewhere, the BoE delivered three interest rate hikes over the period, taking its key Bank Rate to 0.75%. Against this backdrop of tighter monetary policy, most sovereign yield curves flattened over the period.

Performance notes on Fund Reviews

Cumulative Returns are calculated from published Net Asset Value price to published Net Asset Value price with gross income reinvested on ex-dividend dates. For sub-funds where the price adjustment policy has been applied as per note 2 on page 800 to 803, the Cumulative Returns are calculated to or from the adjusted Net Asset Value price.

This calculation does not include any initial charge, and represents the true investment performance of the sub-fund.

The performance figures reported under the column "Since Launch" in the tables are calculated from the commencement of operations until 30 April 2022.

Annualised performance is an alternative way of expressing a sub-fund's total return. It assumes a steady compound rate of growth during the period in question and is not the sub-fund's year by year performance, which fluctuated over the periods shown.

Please note that the Manager's Overviews are based on the first Share class disclosed for each sub-fund. Performance data is expressed in the Share class currency of denomination, indicated by the ISO code shown.

Manager's Overview

US equities declined over the 12-month review period. Markets were firmly in recovery mode in the second quarter of 2021, fuelled by record levels of stimulus and progress in the rollout of COVID-19 vaccines. However, the Omicron variant of COVID-19 somewhat diminished sentiment in the fourth quarter of 2021. Subsequently, equities declined sharply in the first quarter of 2022 following the Russian invasion of Ukraine and the US Federal Reserve's 0.25 percentage point interest rate hike. The Fed indicated that it may raise interest rates at a faster pace to combat persistently high inflation. Most sectors gained, with energy and consumer staples advancing the most.

The fund outperformed the comparative index during the period. Shares in McKesson rose after the bio pharmaceutical company upgraded its guidance for 2022. Its revenues and earnings were ahead of consensus estimates, and it is in the process of streamlining its portfolio. The position in Cheniere Energy rallied as global oil prices rose during the period. Managed health care company Anthem rallied after it released strong first quarter earnings. Revenue and new enrolments beat consensus estimates. Conversely, not holding Apple was detrimental to the fund's performance as its shares were supported by strong earnings growth. The position in Pearson also detracted from returns. Shares in the publishing company declined after it was fined for misleading investors about a data breach. Global technology major Microsoft retreated as growth stocks performed poorly given their exposure to rising rates.

The managers bought a position in Sysco, a major food distributor for restaurants that caters to diverse businesses. This also adds diversification to the portfolio given the company's lower correlation with other holdings. The managers also acquired a new position in beverage company Keurig Dr Pepper due to its attractive end market exposure and pricing power. Positions in Cisco and Activision were sold.

US equities declined over the 12-month review period. Markets were firmly in recovery mode in the second quarter of 2021, fuelled by record levels of stimulus and progress in the rollout of COVID-19 vaccines. However, the Omicron variant of COVID-19 somewhat diminished sentiment in the fourth quarter of 2021. The Fed indicated that it may raise interest rates at a faster pace to combat persistently high inflation. Most sectors gained, with energy, and consumer staples advancing the most.

The fund underperformed the comparative index during the period. Not holding Apple detracted from relative performance. Its shares rose after the iPhone manufacturer released record earnings. The position in XPO Logistics held back gains as investors rotated out of large-cap growth companies. The allocation to FIS declined after it reported weaker than expected earnings. Its Merchant Solutions business was negatively impacted due to COVID-19 related restrictions. On a positive note, shares in Pioneer Natural Resources outperformed, benefiting from a recovery in energy demand. The holding in Farmers Business Network rose after it launched a new farm operating line of credit along with the Environmental Defense Fund, a US-based non-profit environmental advocacy group.

During the period, the managers purchased a new position in multinational pharmaceutical company AstraZeneca. It has an attractive outlook and a broad pipeline that can deliver growth. The broader health care sector is also seen as a safe haven during periods of market volatility. The allocation to Salesforce was also increased. The company should continue to grow at scale over time and is a leader in enterprise software. Positions in ON Semiconductor and Fortive were sold during the period.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 1,190 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Equities in the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) remained subdued over the year, which was marked by rising volatility and a turbulent market environment globally. Investors remained cautious amid uncertainty around the fluid COVID-19 situation, an earlier than expected increase in interest rates by the US Federal Reserve (Fed), rising inflationary pressures and, more recently, concerns surrounding the Russia-Ukraine conflict and its spill over effect on global markets. A resurgence of COVID-19 cases and a slowdown in consumption in China also weighed on sentiment. However, Thai, Malaysian and Indonesian equities outperformed the broader Asian market. A reduction in mobility restrictions and gains from ASEAN commodity exports supported equities.

The fund outperformed the comparative index over the year. The active exposure to Indonesia contributed to returns as it benefited from the re-opening of the economy post COVID-19-related restrictions and an uptrend in commodity prices since the start of 2022. At a stock level, the position in JMT Networks added value, driven by its robust non-performing loans (NPL) and debt collection services business. Shares in Metrodata Electronic rose, driven by strong earnings and strength in its distribution segment. Conversely, ATA IMS fell of favour as it lost its key client Dyson over labour concerns in 2021; the investment thesis was broken. Shares in SEA also remained under pressure as investors drifted away from growth names since the start of 2022, on mounting fears over interest rate hikes by the US Fed.

The portfolio holds businesses that are enduring franchises with sustainable competitive advantages, have a reasonable runway of future growth, attractive valuations with a good risk/reward profile, solid balance sheets and superior capital management ability. Among financials, the manager has strong conviction in Indonesian banks including Bank Negara and Bank Central Asia. The manager also has conviction positions in Thai health care names including Bangkok Dusit Medical Services, which is held for its strong franchise and well-diversified portfolio, and Chularat Hospital, which is expected to benefit from the uptrend in health care demand and the Thai government's Eastern Economic Corridor plan.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 2,400 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Asia Pacific ex Japan equities slid over the period. Investors were cautious amid uncertainty around the COVID-19 situation, an earlier than expected increase in interest rates by the US Federal Reserve (Fed), rising inflation and, more recently, concerns surrounding the Russia-Ukraine conflict and its spill over effect on global markets. Against this backdrop, most countries and sectors in the region ended the period lower.

The fund outperformed the comparative index over the year. Gains were driven by rewarding security selection, notably in the communication services, health care and information technology sectors. Selected materials holdings also added value. The position in precious metals royalty and investment company Franco-Nevada was a key contributor to returns. The company attracted investor interest as the macroeconomic backdrop is increasingly favourable for gold, given rising inflation and the market's intolerance for interest rate increases. A conviction holding in globally diversified financial services provider Macquarie Group added notable value. Its shares advanced on reports of strong earnings. Conversely, the position in e-commerce leader Alibaba declined as investors rotated away from Chinese internet/technology names amid heightened regulatory concerns. The position was sold in the fourth quarter of 2021 due to a thesis break.

The manager focuses on bottom-up stock selection and favours companies that have an understandable business model, an above-average earnings growth rate relative to market expectations and the ability to allocate capital effectively to increase returns on equity over time. The allocation to private lender HDFC Bank was retained. It has a strong balance sheet and the best asset quality among Indian banks. Its valuations are also supportive. Focus Media Information Technology is a preferred position in the portfolio. It is expected to gain from the high utilisation rate of its network of screens as business activity picks up steam and its clients increase their marketing spend.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 1,037 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Asia ex Japan equities slid over the period. Investors were cautious amid uncertainty around the COVID-19 situation, an earlier than expected increase in interest rates by the US Federal Reserve (Fed), rising inflation and, more recently, concerns surrounding the Russia-Ukraine conflict and its spill over effect on global markets. Against this backdrop, most countries and sectors in the region ended the period lower.

The fund lagged the comparative index over the year. The outperformance of value stocks versus growth stocks was a headwind for the fund as it tends to have a growth bias. Security selection in China was the key detractor from returns. The weakness in Chinese equities also had a spill-over effect on holdings in the biotechnology sector, including Zai Lab, Innovent Biologics and Hansoh Pharmaceuticals. The sell-off in the Chinese health care space, given the government's focus on reducing medical costs for citizens, hurt positions in these health care names. The fund retains these stocks given their positive outlook for growth. Innovent has a strong pipeline of innovative drugs and strategic agreements with many global pharmaceutical majors, while Zai Lab and Hansoh Pharmaceuticals will gain from their focus on research and development. In contrast, positions in India's private lender Axis Bank and Bank Rakyat Indonesia, the best micro franchise in Indonesia, added value.

The manager prefers financials, notably high-quality private lenders and insurers. The position in ICICI Bank continues to benefit from growing banking penetration and market share gains from government-owned banks given its strong franchise and technology leadership. The bank is ahead of the curve versus other corporate lenders in recognition of stressed assets and provisioning, and is expected to perform well as investors become more cognisant of this fact. Axis Bank remains one of the key conviction holdings in the portfolio, with a low cost of funds and an attractive returns profile. It has a long runway for growth in the Indian financial services industry.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 1,052 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Small-cap equities in the Asia ex Japan region declined during the year, which was marked by rising volatility and a turbulent market environment globally. Investors remained cautious amid uncertainty around the fluid COVID-19 situation, an earlier than expected increase in interest rates by the US Federal Reserve (Fed), rising inflationary pressures and, more recently, concerns surrounding the Russia-Ukraine conflict and its spill over effect on global markets. A resurgence in COVID-19 cases and a slowdown in consumption in China also weighed on sentiment. The manager continues to focus on fundamental analysis and believes that investing in good businesses run by competent and honest management teams at attractive prices is the most time-tested way to make money in the stock market.

The fund outperformed the comparative index over the year. The outperformance of value stocks over growth names during the period favoured the strategy, while stock selection remained a key driver of returns. At a stock level, the holding in Arwana Citramulia advanced as an economic recovery in Indonesia and favourable real estate policies proved to be tailwinds for the company. The position in KEI Industries is expected to benefit from prospects of increased demand for house wire and stainless-steel wires over the long term. Conversely, shares in Focus Media Information Technology slid amid COVID-19-related lockdowns in top-tier Chinese cities and expectations of shrinking advertising budgets against a tougher macroeconomic backdrop. Furthermore, inflationary pressures in light of a spike in oil and gas prices, combined with COVID-19 disruptions led to a weaker near-term outlook for discretionary spending in China. Consequently, shares in China Yongda Automobiles Services Holdings fell.

The manager looks for companies with strong competitive advantages and good management teams. The focus is on discovering undervalued stocks, leading to a significant share of funds being invested in small and mid-cap companies. The fund avoids unproven business models, highly geared companies, cyclical businesses on peak margins and stocks trading on high earnings or cash flow multiples. There were no major changes to the fund's overall positioning at the country and sector level, except for adjustments driven by stock-specific opportunities.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 2,520 MILLION

Manager's Overview

The current portfolio manager Teera Chanpongsang assumed the management of the portfolio on 1 July 2021, which coincided with a period of rising market volatility, worries about higher inflation and interest rate rises in the US. More recently, in 2022, there was an escalation of geopolitical dissonance in Europe, with wider implications for global economies, stock markets and general investor sentiment. Within China, sentiment was negatively impacted by heightened regulatory uncertainty, which intensified since the second half of 2021 and impacted a cross section of businesses.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the year. The conservative allocation to the energy sector proved less rewarding, as geopolitical uncertainties led to an upswing in oil prices. At a stock level, the lack of exposure to Indian conglomerate Reliance Industries detracted from relative returns, as it was a net beneficiary of elevated geopolitical turmoil. On an encouraging note, the position in Bank Central Asia in the financials sector was the top contributor to returns. Its most recent results were reflective of an ongoing recovery in Indonesia and the bank's strong positioning to take advantage of that recovery, with new lending picking up strongly. Holdings in United Overseas Bank (UOB), E Sun Financial and HDFC Bank also enhanced gains as prospects of a rising interest rate environment and the value rotation supported financial stocks. Meanwhile, not holding Pinduodou supported relative returns. The manager avoided the name as its elevated valuations were not supported by fundamentals.

The portfolio has an emphasis on high-quality companies that are supported by strong management teams, have built strong franchises, and are well positioned to both drive and benefit from structural growth prospects in the region. Among financials, the manager has strong conviction in HDFC Bank, AIA Group and Bank Central Asia. Samsung Electronics, a global leader in memory chips, handsets, display panels and consumer electronics products, is another conviction holding in the portfolio. Taiwan Semiconductor Manufacturing, the largest absolute position in the fund, is retained as it remains a front-runner with cutting edge technology.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : AUD 664 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Australian equities fell over the year. The Omicron variant of COVID-19 led to a decline in sentiment in the initial months of 2022. Global supply chain challenges coupled with the ongoing war in Ukraine also muted investor confidence. However, the rise in commodity prices, accelerated by the Russia-Ukraine conflict, supported Australian equities in the form of sizeable foreign inflows. Against this backdrop, investors sought defensive assets, due to which the utilities and energy sectors outperformed. The information technology (IT) sector underperformed as rising yields negatively impacted growth stocks.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the review period. Security selection in the IT and health care sectors held back gains. Fisher & Paykel Health was caught in profit taking due to the declining severity of the COVID-19 situation and relatively mild flu season, which is expected to hurt demand. Pinnacle Investment Management Group was under pressure amid concerns around global equity markets, which had a direct impact on its ability to generate net inflows and grow funds under management in the short term. Encouragingly, not holding buy now pay later company Afterpay boosted relative returns as its shares tumbled and it reported heavy losses. Clean energy miner IGO advanced as it tracked nickel prices higher. Nickel prices were caught in a short squeeze amid supply concerns due to the Russia-Ukraine crisis.

The fund was repurposed to the Australian Diversified Equity Fund in October 2021, with the aim of achieving income and long-term capital growth primarily through investments in Australian equities, corporate debt instruments and derivatives. The managers focus on finding large and medium-sized companies, but they may also invest in smaller firms that meet their investment criteria. They remain mindful of company fundamentals and focus on the experience and competence of management teams. The strategy favours high-quality companies with a sustainable competitive edge, strong free cash flow generation and robust earnings growth. The high-conviction position in Pinnacle Investment Management Group offers a long runway for growth as it adds affiliates and increases offshore distribution to support continued high net inflows.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 4,256 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Chinese equities fell over the year. Expectations of quicker-than-expected interest rate hikes by the US Federal Reserve, the US' tough stance towards China and regulatory scrutiny over the internet and education sectors unnerved sentiment. Investors also remained cautious amid ongoing Russia-Ukraine tensions. Meanwhile, the People's Bank of China (PBoC) accelerated its pace of monetary easing by lowering several benchmark lending rates in the first quarter of 2022. The PBoC also stated that it would maintain ample liquidity and provide financial support to key sectors.

The fund posted negative returns and underperformed the comparative index over the year. Weak security selection within the communication services sector and the lack of exposure to value areas of the market such as banks held back relative gains. At a stock level, TAL Education Group ADR declined due to regulatory headwinds in the tutoring industry. Additionally, Bilibili slid on fears that online gaming companies would be swept into China's regulatory crackdown. Not holding China Construction Bank (H) and Bank of China (H) also weighed on relative returns as both companies posted strong results for 2021. On the flipside, China Mengniu Dairy rallied on the back of a steady uptick in the consumption of dairy products. Liquor distiller Kweichow Moutai (A) advanced after it announced plans to increase supply to certain key accounts to cope with stronger than expected consumer demand.

The manager continues to focus on companies that exhibit strong pricing power and cash conversion, combined with relatively high return on equity ratios. The long-term consumption story remains intact and themes such as premiumisation, the rise of local brands and 'de-coupling' are likely to advance. The position in textile manufacturer Shenzhou International is favoured as the company enjoys higher bargaining power compared to its peers. Within financials, leading life insurance player AIA Group is a preferred holding in the portfolio due to its leadership position in Asia.

Manager's Overview

Chinese equities fell over the year. Expectations of quicker-than-expected interest rate hikes by the US Federal Reserve, the US' tough stance towards China and regulatory scrutiny over the internet and education sectors unnerved sentiment. Investors also remained cautious amid ongoing Russia-Ukraine tensions. Meanwhile, the People's Bank of China (PBoC) accelerated its pace of monetary easing by lowering several benchmark lending rates in the first quarter of 2022. The PBoC also stated that it would maintain ample liquidity and provide financial support to key sectors.

The fund posted negative returns but outperformed the comparative index over the year. The outperformance of value stocks over growth stocks in an uncertain global market environment added value. Within energy, CNOOC and China Shenhua Energy (H) advanced strongly on the back of surging global oil prices due to escalated Russia-Ukraine tensions. The position in telecommunications player China Mobile gained as it continued to deliver strong financial performance, driven by increased fifth generation (5G) penetration and cost-cutting efforts. Within real estate, state-owned China Overseas Land & Investment and China Resources Land rallied on improving property market sentiment since early 2022. Conversely, an underweight position in JD.Com and the lack of exposure to automotive products manufacturer BYD hurt relative returns. The allocation to Brilliance China Auto Holdings also detracted from returns due to its uncertain outlook.

The manager focuses on both 'New' and 'Old China' sectors, which offer opportunities in quality value names. The manager added positions in internet names such as Alibaba Group, Trip.com and Baidu as these companies focus on following a sound capital allocation strategy (i.e., they allocate more cash to buybacks than deals). Within financials, China Life Insurance (H) is favoured as it stands to benefit from structural growth in the underpenetrated insurance industry. China Construction Bank (H) is another preferred holding given its focus on asset quality and capital positioning.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 154 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Chinese equities slid amid a series of headwinds. Domestically, property woes, regulatory scrutiny on the internet and education sectors, rising commodity prices, a slowing manufacturing sector, a resurgence of COVID-19 and regional lockdowns were among the impediments to the economic recovery. Externally, sentiment was further dampened by US-China tensions, the Russia-Ukraine war and global monetary tightening. On a positive note, the government vowed to step up to support the economy. The People's Bank of China lowered its reserve requirement for banks to inject long-term liquidity to boost the healthy and stable development of the financial markets. Hong Kong and Taiwanese stocks also fell.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the year, mainly due to the market rotation from growth stocks. Selected stocks within health care and financials hurt returns. Online entertainment platform Bilibili slid due to strict regulatory scrutiny and game approval suspension. Shares in biotech company Zai Lab fell amid worries over setbacks in its pipeline, as well as enhanced regulatory supervision, China-US tensions and American depository receipts (ADRs) delisting risks. Internet data centre (IDC) service provider GDS Holdings fell along with the wider IDC sector on concerns about slowing demand, intense competition, unfavourable regulatory developments and the possibility of the delisting of ADRs. Conversely, the position in CIMC Enric Holdings added notable value, driven by the growth of gas consumption in China.

The managers take a thematic approach to fundamental, bottom-up investment, seeking exposure to innovative companies with a focus on growth and quality at a reasonable price. Seeking to capitalise on the acceleration of innovation in China, they apply a deep understanding of the technological, lifestyle and environmental innovations that are reshaping the world to identify underappreciated growth opportunities. Environmental, social and governance (ESG) considerations are integrated in the investment process. As a result, the fund is overweight in the information technology and industrial sectors.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 502 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Emerging Asian equities remained subdued over the year, which was marked by rising volatility and a turbulent market environment globally. Investors remained cautious amid uncertainty around the fluid COVID-19 situation, an earlier than expected increase in interest rates by the US Federal Reserve (Fed), rising inflationary pressures and, more recently, concerns surrounding the Russia-Ukraine conflict and its spill over effect on global markets. A resurgence in COVID-19 cases and a slowdown in consumption in China also weighed on sentiment. Most emerging countries in the region declined over the period. However, Indian and Indonesian equities outperformed the broader market. From a regional perspective, ASEAN equities stood out, driven by a reduction in mobility restrictions and gains from ASEAN commodity exports.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the year. Security selection within India and China weighed on returns. At a stock level, the position in Innovent Biologics declined after its partner Incyte announced the withdrawal of the New Drug Application (NDA) for their pascalisib drug in the US. Shares in SEA remained under pressure as investors drifted away from growth names on mounting fears of interest rate hikes by the US Fed since the beginning of 2022. On a positive note, the exposure to Reliance Industries and China Overseas Land and Investment contributed to returns. Shares in the former benefited from upbeat earnings and elevated geopolitical turmoil, which proved to be a tailwind for commodities, while the latter gained amid gradual policy easing in the real estate sector in China. The allocation to ByteDance advanced as it was a net beneficiary of the surge in digital acceleration trends in China.

The manager favours businesses that are enduring franchises with sustainable competitive advantages, have a reasonable runway of future growth, attractive valuations with a good risk/reward profile, solid balance sheets and superior capital management ability. Among financials, the manager has strong conviction in HDFC Bank, AIA Group and Bank Central Asia. Infosys is also favoured for its sustainable upside potential as India's leading information technology services and outsourcing company.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 280 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Equities in the emerging Europe, Middle East and Africa (EMEA) region fell during the period. Markets were highly volatile due to a number of factors, including the war in Ukraine, high global inflation and tighter financial conditions as the US Federal Reserve adopted a more aggressive stance. Russia's invasion of Ukraine drove inflation higher as commodity prices surged. This provided support to oil-rich gulf countries, including the United Arab Emirates, Kuwait, Qatar and Saudi Arabia. Except financials, industrials and real estate, all sectors ended in negative territory. From a style perspective, value names outperformed their growth counterparts, though both of these ended lower.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the period. At the country level, the overweight position in Russia hurt relative returns. At the sector level, financials holdings were the weakest performers. Sberbank of Russia and TCS Group Holding were negatively impacted by the sell-off in Russian equities. The underweight stance in Russian energy companies Lukoil and Novatek also contributed to relative performance. Encouragingly, Canada-listed copper miner First Quantum Minerals advanced on supportive commodity prices.

The managers follow a bottom-up stock picking approach, as a result of which the fund's country and sector positioning reflects the number of attractive investment opportunities available. The focus remains on owning companies that exhibit quality characteristics, such as low levels of debt and strong market positions. The managers continue to explore opportunities across EMEA ex Russia. They remain invested in internet conglomerate Naspers, which is held via Naspers' shares as well as through a position in Prosus, a Dutch listed entity that provides further exposure to the assets (ex-South Africa). The fund also has positions in South African retailers Pepkor Holdings and The Foschini Group. In a strong commodity price environment, where inflationary pressures persist and supply chain disruption can drive up prices, the high exposure to the materials sector is an attractive attribute. Here, the managers hold Fertigllobe, Jubilee Metals and First Quantum Minerals.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 1,162 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Emerging market equities fell during the period. Markets were highly volatile due a number of factors, including the war in Ukraine, China's regulatory crackdown, high global inflation and tighter financial conditions as the US Federal Reserve adopted a more aggressive stance. In early 2022, COVID-19 triggered lockdowns in China rattled investors given the perceived implications for both domestic and global economies. Russia's invasion of Ukraine drove inflation higher as commodity prices surged. From a style perspective, value names outperformed their growth and quality counterparts, though all these stocks ended lower.

The fund posted negative returns and underperformed the comparative index over the year. At the sector level, financials holdings were the weakest performers. Here, TCS Group Holding was negatively impacted by the sell-off in Russian equities. Another Russian holding Severstal also featured among the key detractors from returns. Conversely, Canada-based copper miner First Quantum Minerals advanced on supportive commodity prices. Security selection in China also added value. The underweight stance in Chinese e-commerce major Alibaba Group aided relative returns. Its shares came under pressure amid ongoing regulatory concerns in the country.

During the period, the focus remained on identifying and owning well-managed businesses with attractive return profiles, an accretive reinvestment opportunity and valuations that offer an adequate margin of safety on a free-cash-flow basis. Within information technology (IT), the fund's largest sector overweight, hardware industry leaders such as TSMC, SK Hynix and Samsung Electronics are held. The managers believe there will be exponential growth in data, and these companies are the building blocks for the processing power and storage that will be needed to handle that data. The fund also has a position in MediaTek, a leading beneficiary of the rollout of fifth generation (5G). In the materials sector, the managers hold First Quantum Minerals, a Canadian listed group with copper assets located across emerging markets.

Manager's Overview

Emerging market equities fell during the period. Markets were highly volatile due a number of factors, including the war in the Ukraine, China's regulatory crackdown, high global inflation and tighter financial conditions as the US Federal Reserve adopted a more aggressive stance. In early 2022, COVID-19 triggered lockdowns in China rattled investors given the perceived implications for both domestic and global economies. From a style perspective, value names outperformed their growth and quality counterparts, though all of these stocks ended lower.

The fund posted negative returns and underperformed the comparative index over the year. At the country level, the overweight position in Russia hurt relative returns. At the sector level, financials holdings were the weakest performers. Sberbank of Russia and TCS Group Holding were negatively impacted by the sell-off in Russian equities. Conversely, copper holdings First Quantum Minerals and Grupo Mexico advanced on supportive commodity prices. Indian information technology (IT) services provider Infosys benefited from market share gains given its focused approach towards scaling its digital and cloud strategy. While China came under scrutiny, the fund's positioning in the market proved rewarding. As regulatory concerns rose, the lack of exposure to targeted industries such as private education and ecommerce proved rewarding.

The fund's country and sector positioning are a residual of the managers' bottom-up stock picking approach, where the most compelling opportunities are found. The managers continue to look for high return, capitalised businesses with under-levered balance sheets. Within IT, which is the largest sector overweight in the portfolio, industry leaders such as Taiwan Semiconductor Manufacturing (TSMC), Samsung Electronics and MediaTek are held. Financials remains a sector with significant exposure, comprising core positions in high quality financials such as HDFC Bank and AIA Group. The fund is overweight in materials, with a focus on companies with high quality assets, low-cost production and strong free-cashflow generation.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : EUR 192 MILLION

Manager's Overview

European markets declined (in USD terms) over the period, due to rising concerns around inflation, higher bond yields, supply chain bottlenecks and the impact of the Omicron variant of COVID-19. Markets recovered in the second half of 2021, driven by increasing optimism over an economic recovery, but declined at the start of 2022 amid rising tensions between Russia and Ukraine.

As a "passive" or "index tracker" fund, the fund is managed to provide returns that are as close as possible to that of the index, which is a concentrated index of the 50 largest companies in the eurozone. However, the fund incurs costs and expenses that the index does not incur - although it can benefit from securities lending when the index cannot. This means fund returns should be similar to the index, rather than identical. Over the period, the primary A-EUR class of the fund returned -2.1% in net euro terms, outperforming the index, which returned -2.4%. Taxation was a positive source of tracking difference, where the fund's withholding tax treatment is more favourable versus the net total return index. Over the period, the same class' ex-post tracking error averaged 0.47% (a 3-year annualised figure, based on 36 month-end data points, is used as it is regarded as more statistically valid). This measure of the variability of fund returns around the index can be influenced by a number of factors, including the aforementioned withholding tax differences, and the fund's partial swing pricing policy, which is designed to manage tracking difference as tightly as possible over time.

Geode Capital Management LLC, a leading specialist in the management of index tracking strategies, was appointed as the sub-investment manager to the fund on 3 January 2017. The managers endeavour to minimise deviation from the index by using an index tracking technique, which comprises full replication of the companies represented in the index. Please note, the fund's cash position, and investment of cash into a liquidity fund for diversification, does not mean that the fund is under exposed to the index, as such positions are typically equitised with equity index futures contracts. This helps to efficiently manage cashflows in the fund at reduced costs. When taking into account exposure achieved by these futures contracts, the fund's holdings weights more closely match the index.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : EUR 3,516 MILLION

Manager's Overview

European markets declined (in USD terms) over the period. In the initial part of the period, a fall in new COVID-19 cases and an acceleration in vaccine rollouts buoyed equities. However, rising concerns around inflation, higher bond yields, supply chain bottlenecks and the impact of the Omicron variant of COVID-19 weighed on sentiment. Markets recovered in the second half of 2021, driven by strong quarterly earnings and increasing optimism over an economic recovery, but declined at the start of 2022 as geopolitical risks escalated sharply amid rising tensions between Russia and Ukraine. Risk aversion rose amid rising interest rate expectations to combat surging inflationary pressures, while China's stringent COVID-19 lockdown policy further dampened sentiment.

The fund underperformed the index over the period, largely due to style headwinds. 2021 proved to be a difficult year for the fund as the market was led by a strong cyclical recovery and the robust performance of a few high growth, high momentum stocks. The outperformance of value stocks in 2022 also impacted the fund given its quality growth bias. The overweight exposure to technology names, particularly holdings in the payments sub-sector, including Worldline and Nexi, was the biggest detractor from relative returns. The allocation to internet holding company Prosus was hurt by weakness in its underlying asset Tencent, as fears of a Chinese regulatory crackdown weighed on sentiment. Some of these losses were offset by strong security selection in health care. Shares in Novo Nordisk and Sonova gained after reporting consensus beating results through the year.

The team is focused on finding quality companies that are trading below their intrinsic value. The managers like businesses where the outlook for growth is not dependent on macroeconomic variables because this allows them to use their expertise in fundamental analysis as a competitive advantage. This bias leads to natural overweight positions in stock picking sectors such as technology, industrials and health care, and leads them to avoid macroeconomically sensitive sectors such as automobiles, banks and energy.

Manager's Overview

European markets declined (in US dollar terms) over the period. In the initial part of the period, a fall in new COVID-19 cases and an acceleration in vaccine rollouts buoyed equities. However, rising concerns around inflation, higher bond yields, supply chain bottlenecks and the impact of the Omicron variant of COVID-19 weighed on sentiment. Risk aversion rose amid rising interest rate expectations to combat surging inflationary pressures, while China's stringent COVID-19 lockdown policy further dampened sentiment.

The fund generated positive returns but underperformed the index over the period, with sector and style headwinds weighing on relative returns. Weak stock selection in health care hampered performance. Shares in health care equipment manufacturer Philips was one of the largest detractors from returns amid concerns surrounding the product recall on its DreamStation One sleep aid device. Not holding pharmaceuticals names Novo-Nordisk and AstraZeneca also held back relative gains. The positioning in consumer discretionary, coupled with weaker performance of internet companies, including Prosus and Just Eat Takeaway, were other key detractors. Some of these losses were offset by strong security selection in energy, particularly the position in Shell, which benefited from rising oil and gas prices.

The managers sees opportunities in three main buckets. First, stocks with stable fundamentals that will keep growing and that are not too expensive in their view. Second, stocks where multiples are near trough and that already price in recession risks. And finally, stocks with more stable fundamentals that are also nearer trough multiples. Overall, the fund is moderately defensive and overweight in companies with more stable earnings. The managers are cautious of companies that are likely to see lower earnings over the next 1–3 years.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : EUR 4 MILLION

Manager's Overview

European markets rose (in euro terms) over the period since inception. Markets recovered in the second half of 2021, driven by strong quarterly earnings and increasing optimism over an economic recovery, but declined at the start of 2022 as geopolitical risks escalated sharply amid rising tensions between Russia and Ukraine. Rising concerns around inflation, higher bond yields, supply chain bottlenecks and the impact of the Omicron variant of COVID-19 earlier in the period also weighed on sentiment. Risk aversion rose amid rising interest rate expectations to combat surging inflationary pressures, while China's stringent COVID-19 lockdown policy further dampened sentiment.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the period since inception. The underweight stance in the energy sector detracted from returns, although strong stock selection in the communication services sector added value. At a stock level, the lack of exposure to energy major Shell weighed on relative returns as the sector benefited from rising oil prices. Speciality chemicals and food ingredients distributor IMCD was the leading contributor to performance.

The fund seeks to offer investors a differentiated source of risk-adjusted returns. It gives exposure to the breadth of Fidelity's proprietary fundamental and sustainable research through a portfolio of securities that are viewed as fundamentally attractive by its experienced research team. The managers use advanced portfolio construction techniques to build a relatively unconstrained strategy that aims to achieve long-term capital growth, primarily through investments in European equities. The fund seeks an overall volatility profile that is lower than the MSCI Europe Index, typically a 20–30% reduction. In addition, environmental, social and governance (ESG) considerations are integrated within the investment process.

The fund will invest at least 50% of its net assets in securities that maintain sustainable characteristics. The fund promotes environmental and social characteristics pursuant to article 8 of SFDR.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : EUR 1,119 MILLION

Manager's Overview

European smaller equities declined (in USD terms) over the period. In the initial part of the period, a fall in new COVID-19 cases and an acceleration in vaccine rollouts buoyed equities. However, rising concerns around inflation, higher bond yields, supply chain bottlenecks and the impact of the Omicron variant of COVID-19 weighed on sentiment. Markets recovered in the second half of 2021, driven by strong quarterly earnings and increasing optimism over an economic recovery, but declined at the start of 2022 as geopolitical risks escalated sharply amid rising tensions between Russia and Ukraine. Risk aversion rose amid rising interest rate expectations to combat surging inflationary pressures, while China's stringent COVID-19 lockdown policy further dampened sentiment.

The fund underperformed the index during the review period, due to disappointing sector allocation and weak security selection. An underweight positioning in real estate, coupled with weaker performance of German real estate business Adler, proved to be the biggest detractor from returns. Negative stock picking in consumer discretionary, particularly internet companies Desenio and Just Eat Takeaway, also held back returns. Some of these losses were partially offset by the strong performance of D'Ieteren and Watches of Switzerland. Positively, stock picking in technology and energy supported performance. Within energy, holdings in Kosmos Energy and Impact Oil & Gas were among the top contributors to returns, as these stocks were driven by the strength in energy prices.

The managers are focussed on identifying well-managed, cash generative companies that have clear market leadership, a sustainable competitive advantage, and profits driven by strong sales growth. In terms of financial characteristics, the portfolio has historically exhibited a quality/growth style bias (currently modest), superior returns on equity/capital, above average growth prospects, a better balance sheet than the benchmark, and is valued at/or around the same levels as the benchmark.

Manager's Overview

Global equities fell over the review period. Tightening monetary policies in view of elevated inflation and geopolitical tensions amid Russia's attack on Ukraine weighed on markets in the latter part of the period. Nevertheless, stock prices were supported by the economic reopening and recovery themes, while encouraging corporate earnings in developed markets, coupled with progress on the roll-out of COVID-19 vaccines globally, further lifted investor sentiment. Against this global backdrop, the UK outperformed other regional markets. From a sector perspective, energy companies rose as crude oil prices surged amid fears that the Russia-Ukraine conflict could disrupt energy supplies. Consumer staples, utilities and health care were also among the leading performers, while communication services and consumer discretionary names led the decliners.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the year. Information technology (IT) was the largest detractor from performance, largely offset by strong stock selection in energy and selected commodity driven stocks across sectors. The lack of exposure to consumer hardware major Apple was another source of weakness. The stock traded as somewhat of a safe haven amid the rotation and selling pressure in the technology space. The position in software company Global Payments weighed on returns as it reported mixed performance. The underperformance in the IT sector was partially offset by the strong performance of Xilinx, a leader in adaptive computing. Elsewhere, logistics player Sinotrans declined despite reporting strong quarterly results, as sentiment weakened due to a resurgence of the pandemic in China. Personal goods company Kao Corporation suffered due to rising input costs. On a positive note, US petroleum refiner Marathon Petroleum was the largest contributor to returns, benefiting from a surge in crude oil prices. Holdings in refiners Coterra Energy and ConocoPhillips also enhanced gains. Bulk shipping company Pacific Basin rose strongly following the release of stellar FY21 results, primarily driven by a steep hike in freight rates.

The managers continue to focus on the highest conviction and most relevant ideas generated by Fidelity's global analyst base. By mitigating unintended risks, they ensure that stock selection is the key driver of risks and returns. Portfolio positioning is therefore a result of their bottom-up stock selection process.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : EUR 4 MILLION

Manager's Overview

European equities ended the month marginally lower as the Russia-Ukraine war entered its third month, with concerns about higher inflation and the increasingly hawkish stance of central banks also contributing to a weaker market environment. Risk aversion rose amid expectations that the European Central Bank (ECB) would follow the US Federal Reserve and raise interest rates to combat surging inflationary pressures, while China's stringent COVID-19 lockdown policy further dampened sentiment. Geopolitical tensions remained elevated with no resolution in sight for the conflict in Ukraine, though markets were supported by the re-election of President Emmanuel Macron in France. Growth stocks underperformed their value counterparts, while quality companies outperformed riskier names. The energy, utilities and consumer staples sectors delivered positive performance in the risk-off environment and against the backdrop of rising energy prices. Conversely, the information technology (IT) and real estate sectors declined.

The fund outperformed the comparative index over the year. Strong security selection in the financials and utilities sectors added value. However, selected positions in health care detracted the most from returns. At a stock level, the position in Spanish utility company Iberdrola contributed to performance despite market concerns about weak hydro conditions and the shutdown of its Cofrentes nuclear plant. The company has one of the strongest outlooks in the sector due to its attractive exposures and its good credentials, such as long-standing corporate relationships and a sizeable balance sheet. In the energy sector, the allocation to Shell and Total Energies added value. Both companies reported solid first quarter results, driven by an improvement in assets and robust capital allocation. Conversely, medical laboratory company Synlab came under pressure despite the acquisition of Spain-based Sistemas Genómicos, which should strengthen its European leadership position in genetics and is a key growth driver for the underlying business.

The fund's investment process is designed to systematically capture the highest conviction ratings among Fidelity's analysts to create portfolios where stock selection is the key driver of risk and returns. The Systematic Investing team uses quantitative methods to ensure the robustness and repeatability of investment outcomes, while applying qualitative discretion to ensure that the portfolio demonstrates the intended characteristics.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : EUR 819 MILLION

Manager's Overview

German equities declined over the period. In the initial part of the period, a decline in new COVID-19 cases and an acceleration in vaccine rollouts buoyed equities. However, rising concerns around inflation, higher bond yields, supply chain bottlenecks and the impact of the Omicron variant of COVID-19 weighed on sentiment. Markets recovered in the second half of 2021, driven by strong quarterly earnings and increasing optimism over an economic recovery, but declined at the start of 2022 as geopolitical risks escalated sharply amid rising tensions between Russia and Ukraine. Risk aversion rose amid expectations that the European Central Bank (ECB) would follow the US Federal Reserve and raise interest rates to combat surging inflationary pressures, while China's stringent COVID-19 lockdown policy further dampened sentiment.

The fund underperformed the index over the review period. The continued strength of cyclical and lower quality businesses has proved unhelpful given the manager's preference for businesses that are less susceptible to macroeconomic vagaries and are supported by structural trends. In this environment, holdings in Grifols, Fresenius and Just Eat, whose characteristics are favoured and which are seen as long-term compounders, struggled. While health care outperformed, holdings in the sector lagged as some of them were more susceptible to COVID-19 disruptions. On a positive note, the lack of exposure to high-valuation high-growth stocks such as Zalando and Delivery Hero contributed to relative performance, as investors started factoring in expectations of rising interest rates and a higher cost of capital.

The conflict in Ukraine is evidently having significant cost/inflationary ramifications on consumers and corporates given rising energy, raw material and food prices. Supply chains are facing further pressure as a result of missing raw materials and parts. Domestic consumer confidence has taken a beating, while Purchasing Managers' Indices (PMI) have lost some momentum. Against this backdrop, the portfolio manager remains of the view that a focus on quality growth businesses trading on reasonable valuations will prove rewarding. Meanwhile, some caution seems warranted around extreme growth/high valuation companies, and lower quality macroeconomically sensitive names that are susceptible to rising cost pressures and slowing demand.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 1,323 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities fell over the period. Initially, a decline in new COVID-19 cases and an acceleration in vaccine rollouts buoyed equities. Strong quarterly earnings and increasing optimism over an economic recovery supported markets in the second half of 2021. However, rising concerns around inflation, higher bond yields, supply chain bottlenecks and the impact of the Omicron variant weighed on sentiment. The start of 2022 has proved challenging amid significant sector and style rotations against a backdrop of rising inflation and interest rates. The war in Ukraine triggered a sharp rise in the cost of energy, further fuelling inflation and inviting a more hawkish tone from most developed market central banks.

The fund underperformed the index over the period, driven by unfavourable positioning across sectors. The overweight exposure to the health care and consumer discretionary sectors notably pared gains. Stock picking within health care, however, added value. At a stock level, the exposure to e-commerce company Alibaba Group and internet conglomerate Naspers hampered returns. These stocks were caught in the sharp sell-off in Chinese equities, triggered by heightened regulation targeting the education, internet, health care and property sectors. As a COVID-19 beneficiary, laboratory products supplier Thermo Fisher Scientific gained in light of the continued need for vaccine development and point-of-care testing given the recent resurgence of cases globally.

The fund invests in companies where earnings are driven by predictable and long-term structural drivers related to demographics. Sector positioning is aligned to demographics driven growth to harness the benefits from factors such as longer lives, with higher life expectancy; better lives, reflecting expanding middle class wealth, particularly in emerging markets; and more lives, stemming from the trend of population growth. The fund also has significant exposure to themes such as digitalisation, automation and a greater focus on health care and wellbeing. The managers expect that it will benefit from the winners in the space, thereby delivering strong growth.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : EUR 2,340 MILLION

Manager's Overview

The financials sector advanced over the period as the ongoing economic recovery provided support. Encouraging corporate earnings in developed markets, coupled with progress on the roll-out of COVID-19 vaccines globally, further supported investor sentiment. However, the emergence of more infectious variants of COVID-19 as well as a resurgence in infections held back gains. Tightening monetary policies in view of elevated inflation and geopolitical tensions amid Russia's attack on Ukraine also weighed on markets in the latter part of the period. Against this backdrop, the UK outperformed other regional markets. At an industry level, diversified financials services and insurance providers emerged as the leading performers.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the period. At a sub-sector level, while banks and financial technology companies held bank gains, capital markets and insurance service providers buoyed returns. At a stock level, payment service providers came under pressure over concerns about increased competitive intensity and delays in an economic reopening impacting cross-border transactions. Worldline and PayPal Holdings declined in this regard. The exposure to Alibaba Group was negatively impacted due to regulatory concerns and slowing consumption in China, in addition to a weak financial revenue forecast. The manager remains invested in the stock as its core marketplace business is a strong cash generator. The company is also likely to continue to grow with the e-commerce sector, driven by growing consumption in China and penetration into newer categories. On a positive note, Arthur J Gallagher outperformed due to strong organic growth trends and margin expansion. Investment advisory company LPL Financial Holdings added value as it reported upbeat quarterly earnings.

The fund is well diversified and the manager is finding high conviction ideas across a number of industries. In the cyclicals space, the emphasis is on banks that earn well above their cost of capital and grow loans in the current environment. In the insurance space, the manager has been increasing the exposure to property & casualty (P&C), with earnings tailwinds from higher pricing and attractive valuations. Within diversified financials, the broker dealer space along with advisors are beneficiaries of rising rates and positive organic flows.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 829 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities declined (in USD terms) as the emergence of more infectious variants of COVID-19 as well as a resurgence in infections held back gains. Tightening monetary policies in view of elevated inflation and geopolitical tensions amid Russia's attack on Ukraine also weighed on markets in the latter part of the period. Against this backdrop, the UK outperformed other regional markets. From a sector perspective, energy companies rose as crude oil prices surged amid fears that the Russia-Ukraine conflict could disrupt energy supplies. Consumer staples, utilities and health care were also among the leading performers, while communication services and consumer discretionary names led the decliners.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the period. While consumer discretionary and health care holdings held back gains, financials and industrials names buoyed performance. At a stock level, internet retail company Asos underperformed due to muted trading activity, as the COVID-19 uncertainty and inclement weather conditions hampered consumer demand. Altice USA declined amid concerns over increased competition and high penetration in the cable arena. Amazon.com came under pressure following disappointing quarterly earnings and a weaker than expected sales forecast. On a positive note, managed health care company UnitedHealth Group reported upbeat quarterly results due to strong growth in the Medicare advantage segment. Berkshire Hathaway (B) contributed to returns following robust quarterly earnings, beating market expectations.

The new portfolio management team comprising Ashish Kochar and Oliver Trimmingham took over the management of the Global Focus strategy on 15 September 2021. At a sector level, the fund has an overweight stance in high quality franchises across the information technology, industrials and financials sectors. At a stock level, diversified holding company Berkshire Hathaway (B) is the top active position in the fund. US-based software company Microsoft remains a key active position within the technology domain.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : EUR 1,800 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities gained over the period. In the initial part of the period, a decline in new COVID-19 cases and an acceleration in vaccine rollouts buoyed equities. However, rising concerns around inflation, higher bond yields, supply chain bottlenecks and the impact of the Omicron variant of COVID-19 weighed on sentiment. Markets recovered in the second half of 2021, driven by strong quarterly earnings and increasing optimism over an economic recovery. Global equities fell in the first quarter as Russia's invasion of Ukraine prompted Western countries to impose economic sanctions against Russia and raised concerns about global growth expectations, as well as the disruption it could cause to global energy markets. A tightening policy stance by major central banks also weighed on equities as inflation surged.

The fund underperformed the index over the review period. At a sub-sector level, the overweight exposure to the life science tools & services sector and the underweight stance in pharmaceuticals notably pared gains. On a positive note, stock picking within these two sub-sectors added value. At a stock level, the lack of exposure to pharmaceutical and biotechnology company Pfizer weighed on relative returns. The company has performed well given strong sales of COVID-19 vaccines and prospects of booster vaccines. Shares in clear aligners manufacturer Align Technology suffered as it reported mixed fourth quarter results for 2021 and a weak guidance on organic growth and margins for the first quarter of 2022. Not holding medical device maker Medtronic added relative value after it released a discouraging business update for the clinical trial of its Symplicity Renal Denervation System.

The fund invests in good quality companies that are set to benefit from long-term structural growth drivers within health care, namely the ageing of the population and increased health care needs. These companies tend to be defensive in nature, as even in times of volatility and uncertainty, demand for drugs and medical procedures will not change. The fund remains overweight in the life sciences tools and services sub-sector, but has selected positions and an underweight stance in the pharmaceuticals sector.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : EUR 240 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities fell over the period. Initially, a decline in new COVID-19 cases buoyed equities. Strong quarterly earnings and increasing optimism over an economic recovery supported markets in the second half of 2021. However, rising concerns around inflation, supply chain bottlenecks and the impact of the Omicron variant of COVID-19 weighed on sentiment. The start of 2022 has proved challenging amid significant sector and style rotations against a backdrop of rising inflation and interest rates. The war in Ukraine triggered a sharp rise in oil prices, further fuelling inflation and inviting a more hawkish tone from most central banks.

The fund outperformed the comparative index over the 12-month period. Shares in US-based construction materials business Carlisle Companies rose after it released better-than-expected quarterly results. The company revealed strong earnings and revenues for the first quarter. The holding in chemicals company GCP Applied Technologies rallied after it agreed to be acquired by materials company Saint-Gobain. The acquisition will help GCP to gain resources as well as bolster its expertise in innovation. The position in oil refiner Chevron advanced after the US banned imports of Russian oil and gas, sending global oil prices higher. The allocation to Diversy Holdings detracted from performance. Its shares were sold off as investors were cautious on the impact of rising oil prices due to the Russia/Ukraine conflict. Shares in FedEx slid after investors predicted a slowdown in the global economy, as central banks increase interest rates at a faster than expected pace. The position in Rolls-Royce fell as oil prices remained volatile in April 2022, and inflation continued to surge to a multi-decade high.

The manager continues to invest in companies that match his core investment philosophy and holds good businesses with robust balance sheets run by strong management teams at reasonable valuations. The fund has exposure to companies that tend to have robust pricing power and benefit from higher prices. These companies are also potential beneficiaries of a higher inflation scenario. The fund is currently overweight in aerospace & defence companies, road & rail operators and chemicals companies. The top active holdings in the portfolio include high quality franchises FedEx, Union Pacific and L3Harris Technologies.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 35 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities fell over the review period. Tightening monetary policies in view of elevated inflation and geopolitical tensions amid Russia's attack on Ukraine weighed on markets in the latter part of the period. The emergence of more infectious variants of COVID-19 as well as a resurgence in infections also held back gains earlier in the period. Nevertheless, stock prices were supported by the economic reopening and recovery themes, while encouraging corporate earnings in developed markets, coupled with progress on the roll-out of COVID-19 vaccines globally, further lifted investor sentiment. Against this global backdrop, the UK outperformed other regional markets. From a sector perspective, energy companies rose as crude oil prices surged amid fears that the Russia-Ukraine conflict could disrupt energy supplies. Consumer staples, utilities and health care were also among the leading performers, while communication services and consumer discretionary names led the decliners.

The fund outperformed the comparative index over the year. Stock selection in the industrials and health care sectors contributed to returns, but the underweight stance in energy detracted from relative performance against the backdrop of rising oil prices. The underweight position in Amazon contributed to relative returns as the e-commerce major reported disappointing earnings. The holding in pharmaceuticals group Eli Lilly rose as its potential blockbuster obesity drug achieved its goal of helping patients lose more than 20% weight in a late-stage clinical trial. The company also reported first-quarter earnings that topped estimates. The underweight allocation to consumer hardware major Apple detracted from relative returns. The stock traded as somewhat of a safe haven amid the rotation and selling pressure in the technology space.

At the portfolio level, the managers maintained their current strategy of exposure to high fundamental buy ratings, while seeking to minimise absolute risk, with an expectation of achieving 60%–80% of the volatility of the MSCI World Index in the long term.

Manager's Overview

Global property markets performed strongly over the review period. At a sub-sector level, industrials was the top performer. From a country perspective, the US housing market gained despite rising mortgage rates as homebuying demand remained relatively high during a time when inventory is still markedly low. In the eurozone, the German property market was weighed down by Adler Group due to short-term pressure following questions on governance and political risks. Within Asia, property stocks in Hong Kong fell on news flows around liquidity issues at Chinese property developer Evergrande. However, fresh signs of policy easing provided some support.

The fund outperformed the comparative index over the period. US holdings performed very well on supportive fundamentals and continued strong earnings updates. This was reflected at the sector level as well, where the more resilient residential and buoyant industrials (that form a core component of the portfolio) emerged as the top contributors to performance. In this regard, Prologis REIT, Camden Property Trust REIT, Invitation Homes REIT and American Homes 4 Rent REIT contributed strongly to relative performance.

The fund has a sizeable allocation to the US, with a preference for single family rental and manufactured housing. Within Europe, the manager prefers German multifamily rental equities and Dutch offices. The portfolio has a small overweight stance in the UK as valuations are attractive. However, the longer term GDP outlook remains weak given the implications of Brexit. In Asia, the manager prefers developers in Japan, as well as companies that operate in the offices segment in India and Hong Kong. However, the fund maintains an underweight stance in Hong Kong on persistent governance issues. At the industry level, the portfolio retains a longstanding overweight exposure to the residential segment, and a large underweight in retail as the outlook remains poor and balance sheets are troubled.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : EUR 13,371 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities fell in US dollar terms over the review period, but rose in euro terms. Tightening monetary policies in view of elevated inflation and geopolitical tensions amid Russia's attack on Ukraine weighed on markets in the latter part of the period. The emergence of more infectious variants of COVID-19 as well as a resurgence in infections held back gains earlier in the period. Nevertheless, stock prices were supported by the economic reopening and recovery themes, while encouraging corporate earnings in developed markets, coupled with progress on the roll-out of COVID-19 vaccines globally, further lifted investor sentiment. Against this global backdrop, the UK outperformed other regional markets. From a sector perspective, energy companies rose as crude oil prices surged amid fears that the Russia-Ukraine conflict could disrupt energy supplies. Consumer staples, utilities and health care were also among the leading performers, while communication services and consumer discretionary names led the decliners. The information technology (IT) sector rose over the review period.

The fund recorded positive returns but underperformed the comparative index over the year. Strong stock selection in the IT services and software sectors drove returns, but was less beneficial in the internet & direct marketing retail segment. The underweight stance in the technology hardware, storage & peripherals industry also held back relative gains. The structural underweight stance in consumer hardware major Apple was a source of weakness. The stock traded as somewhat of a safe haven amid the rotation and selling pressure in the technology space. Shares in Chinese e-commerce major Alibaba fell as it reported underwhelming earnings, while regulatory pressures further weighed on the stock. On a positive note, Baker Hughes, the global leader in energy technology, rose after it acquired Altus Intervention. The acquisition will enhance the company's portfolio of oilfield technologies and increase efficiencies in existing oil wells. Rising oil and natural gas prices also supported its shares.

The portfolio manager continues to employ a fundamental, bottom-up approach. The focus remains on structural technological developments to identify companies that are well positioned to capitalise on some opportunities in the sector, such as cloud, e-commerce and artificial intelligence. These are the long-term growth drivers and stocks that are misunderstood by the market for some reason, and are trading at attractive valuations.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 1,956 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities fell in US dollar terms but were up in euro and sterling terms over the review period. Tightening monetary policies in view of elevated inflation and geopolitical tensions amid Russia's attack on Ukraine weighed on markets in the latter part of the period. The emergence of more infectious variants of COVID-19 as well as a resurgence in infections held back gains earlier in the period. Nevertheless, stock prices were supported by the economic reopening and recovery themes, while encouraging corporate earnings in developed markets, coupled with progress on the roll-out of COVID-19 vaccines globally, lifted investor sentiment. Against this global backdrop, energy companies rose as crude oil prices surged amid fears that the Russia-Ukraine conflict could disrupt energy supplies. Consumer staples, utilities and health care were also among the leading performers, while communication services and consumer discretionary names led the decliners.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the year. A strategy that focuses on the consumption theme in China lagged global equities due to worries about heightened regulatory pressure in the country, as well as the impact of lockdowns. The allocation to the Sustainable Climate Solutions strategy also weighed on relative performance. Meanwhile, the allocation to the more defensive Global Health Care strategy contributed to relative returns.

During the second half of 2021, the departure of the lead portfolio manager of the underlying Innovation in Medicine strategy led to an immediate review of that fund. Given the long-term growth dynamics in the health care sector, the strategy was replicated through a combination of the Fidelity Global Healthcare strategy and third-party exchange-traded funds (ETFs). The team added a China Internet stock basket to the portfolio in the fourth quarter of 2021. The exposure to the China consumer theme was reduced over the period, given the increasingly challenging environment for consumption in light of rising energy prices, slowing growth and COVID-19-related lockdowns. The exposure to the US technology sector was reduced in the first quarter of 2022 due to stretched valuations. Meanwhile, the allocation to the cybersecurity space was increased.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 936 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Chinese equities slid amid a series of headwinds. Domestically, property woes, regulatory scrutiny on the internet and education sectors, rising commodity prices, a slowing manufacturing sector, and a resurgence of COVID-19 outbreaks and the resultant regional lockdowns were among the impediments to an economic recovery. Externally, sentiment was further dampened by US-China tensions. Meanwhile, investors remained cautious about the economic impact of the Russia-Ukraine war and global monetary tightening. On a positive note, the government vowed to step up to support the economy. The People's Bank of China lowered its reserve requirement for banks to inject long-term liquidity to boost the healthy and stable development of financial markets. Hong Kong and Taiwanese stocks also fell.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the period, mainly due to selected stocks in the industrials and health care sectors amid regulatory uncertainty, as well as a value rotation in Chinese markets. Shares in short video platform Kuaishou slid, factoring in expectations of regulations on livestreaming, a slowdown in user and revenue growth and rising competition. Transcatheter aortic valve replacement manufacturer Peijia Medical declined amid concerns over the regulatory impact from the Government Pharmaceutical Organization, market penetration and price competition. Conversely, Taiwan-based financial holding company E.SUN Financial Holding rose, driven by its resilience during COVID-19 and a favourable outlook for interest rate increases.

The manager continues to focus on areas that can deliver sustainable growth over the next three to five years. As a result of the bottom-up stock selection process, the fund has an overweight exposure to China and an underweight allocation to Hong Kong and Taiwan. Sportswear company Li Ning is preferred for its brand and product innovation. The stock is expected to benefit from its strong momentum in sales and its potential to capture further market share. High-end baijiu maker Kweichow Moutai and dairy products manufacturer China Mengniu Dairy are other key positions in the portfolio.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 669 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Chinese equities slid amid a series of headwinds. Domestically, property woes, regulatory scrutiny on the internet and education sectors, rising commodity prices, a slowing manufacturing sector, and a resurgence of COVID-19 outbreaks and the resultant regional lockdowns were among the impediments to an economic recovery. Externally, sentiment was further dampened by US-China tensions. Meanwhile, investors remained cautious about the economic impact of the Russia-Ukraine war and global monetary tightening. On a positive note, the government vowed to step up to support the economy. The People's Bank of China lowered its reserve requirement for banks to inject long-term liquidity to boost the healthy and stable development of financial markets. Hong Kong and Taiwanese stocks also fell.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the period, mainly due to selected stocks in the industrials and communication services sectors amid regulatory uncertainty, as well as a value rotation in Chinese markets. Shares in short video platform Kuaishou slid, factoring in expectations of regulations on livestreaming, a slowdown in user and revenue growth and rising competition. Transcatheter aortic valve replacement manufacturer Peijia Medical declined amid concerns over the regulatory impact from the Government Pharmaceutical Organization, market penetration and price competition. Conversely, Taiwan-based financial holding company E.SUN Financial Holding rose, driven by its resilience during COVID-19 and a favourable outlook for interest rate increases.

The manager continues to focus on areas that can deliver sustainable growth over the next three to five years. As a result of the bottom-up stock selection process, the fund has an overweight exposure to China and an underweight allocation to Hong Kong and Taiwan. Sportswear company Li Ning is preferred for its brand and product innovation. The stock is expected to benefit from its strong momentum in sales and its potential to capture further market share. High-end baijiu maker Kweichow Moutai and dairy products manufacturer China Mengniu Dairy are other key positions in the portfolio.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : EUR 172 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Iberian equities, along with its European counterparts, declined (in US dollar terms) over the period. In the initial part of the period, a fall in new COVID-19 cases and an acceleration in vaccine rollouts buoyed equities. However, rising concerns around inflation, higher bond yields, supply chain bottlenecks and the impact of the Omicron variant of COVID-19 weighed on sentiment. Markets recovered in the second half of 2021, driven by strong quarterly earnings and increasing optimism over an economic recovery, but declined at the start of 2022 as geopolitical risks escalated sharply amid rising tensions between Russia and Ukraine. Risk aversion rose amid rising interest rate expectations to combat surging inflationary pressures, while China's stringent COVID-19 lockdown policy dampened sentiment.

The fund underperformed the index over the review period, due to negative security selection and disappointing sector allocation. The overweight exposure to consumer discretionary names, particularly holdings in internet businesses Prosus and Just Eat Takeaway, proved to be the biggest detractors from returns on a relative basis. The lack of exposure to energy stocks including Repsol also hampered performance, as the sector was supported by rising oil and gas prices. Some of these losses were offset by favourable positioning in the utilities sector. The managers remain very selective when considering regulated utilities due to the inherent interest rate risk in these businesses, though they prefer attractive companies with exposure to renewables. Within utilities, holdings in Acciona Energias Renovables and Iberdrola were among the top contributors to relative returns.

The managers are focused on identifying opportunities in structural growth businesses and attractively valued consumer businesses that have encouraging long-term growth prospects and better return profiles. At a sector level, the fund retains a large overweight in industrials, technology and health care, as these areas offer a range of growth opportunities supported by wider structural themes such as ageing populations, globalisation and digitalisation.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 1,996 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Indian equities advanced over the period. The start of the period witnessed a massive second wave of COVID-19 infections in India. Investor sentiment improved subsequently as the number of cases subsided and mobility restrictions eased. A rise in vaccination rates also supported equities. Ample liquidity in a record low interest rate environment drove the market higher. Towards the end of the period, concerns around the Russia-Ukraine conflict, the resultant surge in commodity and oil prices and its potential impact on the Indian economy dominated investor sentiment. Markets were also volatile amid rising inflationary pressures and an interest rate hike by the US Federal Reserve (Fed).

In this environment, the ongoing rotation towards value stocks accelerated since the start of 2022, which proved to be a headwind for the fund as it has a growth bias. The fund's relative underperformance over the year was also due to the capital gains tax, which is not applied on the index. Selected financials came under pressure. In particular, private lenders HDFC Bank and Axis Bank lagged the market. More recently, HDFC Bank's shares declined on profit taking after a strong rally following the announcement of its merger with mortgage lender Housing Development Finance Corporation. Nevertheless, HDFC Bank is preferred for its strong deposit franchise, low cost of funds and high asset quality. The conservative allocation to Reliance Industries undermined relative returns as it was a net beneficiary of the rise in oil and gas prices. Conversely, the allocation to automobile component manufacturer Sona BLW Precision proved rewarding. It generates a significant proportion of total revenue by supplying differential gears to global electric vehicle (EV) manufacturers. Shares in Devyani International, the largest franchisee of Yum! brands in India, gained. Investor sentiment was boosted by KFC's strong brand equity and an increasing focus on delivery by Pizza Hut.

The fund is positioned to benefit from India's long-term growth and structurally positive domestic consumption trends. The portfolio remains overweight in financials, particularly in the best quality private banks in India. Of note, HDFC Bank and Axis Bank are key positions in the portfolio. ICICI Bank continues to benefit from growing banking penetration and market share gains from government-owned banks given its strong franchise and technological leadership.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 308 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Indonesian equities advanced over the period, after the country reported accelerated economic growth in the fourth quarter of 2021, led by healthy domestic dynamics and easing COVID-19 restrictions. In addition, gains from commodity exports, including metals, coal and crude and palm oil supported the economy as elevated geopolitical concerns between Russia and Ukraine proved to be a tailwind for commodities. In this environment, energy was the leading performer, while the industrials sector was the key laggard.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the review period. Security selection in the communication services sector held back gains. Leading internet company SEA slid due to concerns around a deceleration in its gaming revenue, and the overall market rotation from growth into value stocks. However, its long-term drivers remain intact, with e-commerce revenue growth exceeding expectations and given management's focus on profitable growth. The lack of exposure to Merdeka Copper Gold detracted from relative returns. The mining company advanced despite overstretched valuations and limited gold-mine life. Encouragingly, the underweight allocation to Unilever Indonesia and poultry processing company Charoen Pokphand contributed to relative returns. Shares in the former came under pressure as its market share losses led to a decline in its net income on a year-on-year basis. The position in the latter was sold while it was still trading at expensive valuations.

The manager pursues a well-balanced approach to bottom-up stock selection, seeking to identify opportunities across various stages of the industry lifecycle (i.e., in both "growth" and "mature" industries), and regardless of the sensitivity to business cycles (i.e., in both "defensive" and "cyclical" industries). This approach is necessary in Indonesia given the limited market breadth, and provides superior investment results versus chasing a specific theme or narrow style bias. The manager is optimistic about the information technology and industrials sectors, and believes that these stocks can have a positive impact on relative returns.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : EUR 292 MILLION

Manager's Overview

European markets fell (in US dollar terms) over the period. In the initial part of the period, a fall in new COVID-19 cases and an acceleration in vaccine rollouts buoyed equities. Strong quarterly earnings and increasing optimism over an economic recovery supported markets in the second half of 2021. However, rising concerns around inflation, higher bond yields, supply chain bottlenecks and the impact of the Omicron variant weighed on sentiment. The start of 2022 has proved challenging amid significant sector and style rotation against a backdrop of rising inflation and interest rates. The war in Ukraine triggered a sharp rise in the cost of energy, further fuelling inflation and inviting a more hawkish tone from most developed market central banks.

The fund underperformed the index over the period, primarily due to the bias against energy. Strong stock picking in the financials and information technology (IT) sectors and the underweight stance in utilities enhanced gains. At a stock level, the bias against oil and gas company ENI was the most notable detractor from relative performance, as its shares benefited from the strength in oil prices. The underweight allocation to agricultural equipment and vehicle manufacturer CNH Industrial pared relative returns as its shares benefited from the style rotation towards value names. The allocation to commercial vehicles manufacturer Iveco Group also declined in the risk-off environment. Encouragingly, the holding in BE Shaping the Future related on the back of strong organic growth in the third quarter of 2021 and guidance upgrades for the beginning of 2022.

The manager looks for opportunities in companies where the market fails to see future growth potential based on short-term issues or misconceptions. The current focus is to add to those companies that are trading on interesting valuation multiples and are likely to benefit from structural growth drivers. There is an additional focus on companies with strong sustainable characteristics, including, but not limited to, governance and superior management of environmental, social and governance (ESG) issues. The fund has large overweight positions in the industrials, consumer discretionary and IT sectors.

Manager's Overview

Japanese equities advanced in yen terms over the period. Share price gains were supported by strong earnings momentum and domestic political developments, while rising vaccination rates lifted investor sentiment. However, the Japanese government's decision to extend the state of emergency amid rising concerns over the spread of COVID-19 weighed on sentiment earlier in the year. Concerns over Russia's invasion of Ukraine, its spill over effect on the global economy and broadening inflationary risks, as well as increasing interest rates capped gains in the second half of the period. Sentiment was also hit by fears about the damage that the Omicron variant of COVID-19 could inflict on the economy. Earnings results were favourable, generally coming in ahead of expectations, and the market reacted positively to companies that announced upward revisions and increased dividends. Meanwhile, the yen weakened against the US dollar, benefiting export-oriented companies. At a sector level, energy and financials were the leading gainers. Conversely, communication services and consumer discretionary names were the weakest performers.

The fund recorded positive returns and outperformed the comparative index over the year. Strong stock selection in the electric appliances and retail trade sectors and an overweight exposure to insurers contributed to returns. The holding in oil developer Inpex was among the standout contributors to returns. Profits in upstream businesses (oil and gas field operations) were expected to exceed forecasts due to higher crude oil prices. At the same time, investors welcomed the company's commitment to increase shareholder returns. Life insurers benefited from the uptrend in yields, while property and casualty (P&C) names found favour for their strong and stable shareholder returns. Key contributors included Sampo Holdings, T&D Holdings and Tokio Marine Holdings. In the machinery sector, the position in THK, a leading maker of linear motion systems with a high global market share, detracted from performance.

Uncertainty stemming from the war in Ukraine and rising inflationary pressures will continue to impact markets, though there are opportunities to buy oversold names. Looking further ahead, a resolution to the crisis in Ukraine will see markets return to the Omicron reopening story in Japan and interest rates will likely bounce back quite sharply. The manager believes that reopening names are well positioned, and there is likely to be a pullback in demand from "stay at home" goods.

Manager's Overview

Japanese equities advanced over the 12-month period in yen terms. Share price gains were supported by strong earnings momentum and domestic political developments, while rising vaccination rates lifted investor sentiment. However, the Japanese government's decision to extend the state of emergency amid rising concerns over the spread of COVID-19 weighed on sentiment earlier in the year. Concerns over Russia's invasion of Ukraine, its spill over effect on the global economy and broadening inflationary risks, as well as increasing interest rates capped gains in the second half of the period. Sentiment was also hit by fears about the damage that the Omicron variant of COVID-19 could inflict on the economy. Earnings results were favourable, generally coming in ahead of expectations, and the market reacted positively to companies that announced upward revisions and increased dividends. Meanwhile, the yen weakened against the US dollar, benefiting export-oriented companies. At a sector level, energy and financials were the leading gainers. Conversely, communication services and consumer discretionary names were the weakest performers.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the year. Strong stock selection in the electric appliances and services sectors contributed to returns. This was offset by the weak performance of selected holdings in the information & communication sectors. The position in business-to-business e-gift platform Giftee fell amid concerns over the impact of the Omicron variant of COVID-19, as well as downward revisions to its full-year earnings guidance. However, the earnings downgrade was largely due to the postponement of the government's GoTo Travel campaign. Mitsui High-Tec, a leading producer of motor cores used in electric vehicle (EV) drive trains, was a notable contributor to returns. It announced above-consensus annual results and provided strong guidance for fiscal 2022, citing growing motor-core demand and brisk momentum in electronic components.

The manager turned a bit more cautious towards the end of last year (inventories were on the rise in the manufacturing sector and there were signs of a post-COVID-19 shift from goods to services) and looked more towards companies that can grow sustainably through the second half of 2022 and 2023. Consequently, the fund focuses on defensive/sustainable growth names and services companies that can grow earnings in a more difficult environment through the second half of 2022/2023, as well as on companies that can positively surprise the market on mid-term growth.

Manager's Overview

Latin American equities were positive during the review period and outperformed the broader emerging market and developed market universe, which was negatively impacted by the Russia-Ukraine crisis. Regional equities benefited as investors were attracted to cheap valuations, while the resource rich nature of the region provided an alternative to Russia, which was rendered un-investable due to the war. The strong performance of commodities supported Latin American markets. Brent crude oil rose to US$138 per barrel for the first time in 13 years as geopolitical tensions escalated after Russia invaded Ukraine in late February. At a sector level, energy was the best performer, while consumer discretionary stocks were badly hit in an inflationary backdrop.

The fund posted negative returns and underperformed the comparative index over the year. At a sector level, the positioning stance in the energy sector hampered relative returns. Here, the underweight holding in Brazilian oil major Petrobras detracted from relative performance. Conversely, Canada-listed copper miner First Quantum Minerals enhanced gains, driven by supportive commodity prices in an inflationary environment. Not holding America Movil (telecommunication) added relative value. Elsewhere, high growth stocks MercadoLibre (Brazilian e-commerce platform) and Globant (information technology services) suffered as the market rotated from growth to value names.

The fund's sector and country positioning is a residual of the bottom-up stock picking process. The managers continue to focus on owning companies that exhibit quality characteristics, such as low levels of debt and strong market positions. The fund maintains a longstanding overweight in the industrials and consumer discretionary sectors. At a country level, the managers have significant exposure to Brazil and Mexico. Overall, they believe this remains a well-balanced portfolio, which is well equipped to navigate what will remain a challenging environment. Within industrials, the managers prefer transportation stocks. Mexican low-cost carrier Volaris benefits from market share gains due to industry consolidation and significant growth potential as demand recovers with the vaccine roll-out.

Manager's Overview

Nordic equities gained over the period. In the initial part of the period, a decline in new COVID-19 cases and an acceleration in vaccine rollouts buoyed equities. However, rising concerns around inflation, higher bond yields, supply chain bottlenecks and the impact of the Omicron variant of COVID-19 weighed on sentiment. Markets recovered in the second half of 2021, driven by strong quarterly earnings and increasing optimism over an economic recovery, but declined at the start of 2022 as geopolitical risks escalated sharply amid rising tensions between Russia and Ukraine. A tightening policy stance by major central banks also weighed on equities as inflation surged.

The fund posted strong absolute performance but slightly underperformed the index over the review period, largely due to negative sector allocation, including the lack of exposure to health care stocks. In this context, not holding index-heavyweight Novo Nordisk hurt relative performance as its shares continued to strengthen following strong results and upgrades to its full-year sales and profit outlook. Network infrastructure services provider Eltel also underperformed, driven by continued challenges in its Polish High Voltage business and cost inflation. On a positive note, an overweight allocation to basic materials, energy and industrial transportation stocks proved rewarding, as geopolitical uncertainties led to a sharp upswing in underlying commodity prices and tanker freight rates. As a result, conviction holdings in oil producer Equinor, aluminium producer Norsk Hydro and industrial transportation companies Stolt Nielsen and TORM added notable value.

The uncertainty caused by the war and the inflation environment pose some new challenges for the European market. We believe it is important to remain selective and focus on regions with sound public finances and a favourable business environment, notably through attractive taxation. Beyond the current conflict between Russia and Ukraine, the economic environment clearly calls for a value approach, which focuses on companies with little debt and a proven track record of earnings growth.

Manager's Overview

Regional equities declined over the year. Chinese equities slid amid a series of headwinds, which included property woes, regulatory scrutiny, a slowing manufacturing sector and lockdowns related to COVID-19 outbreaks. Japanese equities advanced in local currency terms but fell in US dollar terms. Share price gains were supported by strong earnings momentum, domestic political developments and rising vaccinations rates. Policy support by Australian authorities and a pickup in the pace of vaccination supported the domestic market.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the year. Internet service provider Coconala and online retail giant Rakuten Group declined as they were caught in the broad market sell-off. The allocation to Grab Holdings hampered performance as it reported larger-than-expected losses due to a decline in revenues and higher driver incentives amid the deteriorating competitive landscape. The position in software outsourcing company FPT advanced as it released strong results and an optimistic outlook driven by its technology segment. The position in clinical-stage biotech firm Telix Pharmaceuticals advanced. The company's lead prostate cancer imaging product Illuccix has been a catalyst for share price growth over the period. Telix recently received approval from the US Food and Drug Administration (FDA) for Illuccix, making it the company's first product to receive US market approval.

The manager focuses on companies with good long-term growth prospects that are cash generative and have strong management teams. Telix Pharmaceuticals is a key holding as it has a unique portfolio of assets with a solid foundation in molecularly targeted radiation for the treatment of various cancers. The strength in FPT is underpinned by its strong market share and competitive advantage. The company stands to benefit from robust growth in Vietnam's software outsourcing space. Japan-based Digital Garage has an extremely valuable payment business with substantial revenue and earnings growth potential given the reopening of international and domestic borders.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : EUR 4 MILLION

Manager's Overview

European markets rose (in euro terms) over the period since inception. Markets recovered in the second half of 2021, driven by strong quarterly earnings and increasing optimism over an economic recovery, but declined at the start of 2022 as geopolitical risks escalated sharply amid rising tensions between Russia and Ukraine. Rising concerns around inflation, higher bond yields, supply chain bottlenecks and the impact of the Omicron variant of COVID-19 earlier in the period also weighed on sentiment. Risk aversion rose amid rising interest rate expectations to combat surging inflationary pressures, while China's stringent COVID-19 lockdown policy further dampened sentiment.

The fund underperformed the comparative index from the period since inception. The fund aims to provide long-term capital growth from a portfolio made up of at least 70% of European securities that comprises of three sub-components (referred to as a "Component"). The first Component is comprised of a 'long only' equity portfolio of European companies that are considered to be good quality businesses that trade at attractive valuations. This Component will represent 0–100% of the fund's total net assets. The second Component is comprised of a global market neutral strategy, which will be achieved through long and short positions in equities and related instruments, as well as in cash, cash equivalents and money market instruments. As part of the third Component, the fund will gain long exposure to those companies deemed attractive, while maintaining short positions in those companies deemed unattractive. This Component will typically have net equity exposure between -30% and 30%. The allocation to this Component will comprise 0–60% of the fund's total net assets.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 3,267 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Asia ex Japan equities slid over the period. Investors were cautious amid uncertainty around the COVID-19 situation, an earlier than expected increase in interest rates by the US Federal Reserve (Fed), rising inflation and, more recently, concerns surrounding the Russia-Ukraine conflict and its spill over effect on global markets. Most countries and sectors in the region ended the period lower.

The fund lagged the comparative index over the year. The outperformance of value stocks versus growth stocks was a headwind for the fund as it tends to have a growth bias. Security selection in China was the key detractor from returns. The weakness in Chinese equities also had a spill-over effect on holdings in the biotechnology sector, including Zai Lab, Innovent Biologics and Hansoh Pharmaceuticals. The sell-off in the Chinese health care space, given the government's focus on reducing medical costs for citizens, hurt selected positions. The fund retains these stocks given their positive outlook for growth. Innovent has a strong pipeline of innovative drugs and strategic agreements with many global pharmaceutical majors, while Zai Lab and Hansoh Pharmaceuticals will gain from their focus on new drug research and development. In contrast, positions in India's third-largest private lender Axis Bank and Bank Rakyat Indonesia, the best micro franchise in Indonesia, added value.

The fund is focused on engagement and a deeper integration of environmental, social and corporate governance (ESG) issues in the investment process to create a portfolio of high-quality growth companies that maintain high sustainability characteristics. The portfolio had 85.5% exposure to stocks with high ESG ratings, which are either rated BBB and above as per MSCI or rated C or above based on Fidelity's proprietary ESG rating where MSCI ratings are not available due to non-coverage. 9.3% of the fund is invested in stocks with lower but improving ESG characteristics. These are companies that are rated BB or below by MSCI, but where the fund management team believes the company could demonstrate significant improvement via Fidelity's engagement efforts.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 4 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Chinese equities slid amid a series of headwinds. Domestically, property woes, regulatory scrutiny on the internet and education sectors, rising commodity prices, a slowing manufacturing sector, and a resurgence of COVID-19 outbreaks and resultant regional lockdowns were among the impediments to an economic recovery. Externally, sentiment was further dampened by US-China tensions. Meanwhile, investors remained cautious about the economic impact of the Russia-Ukraine war and global monetary tightening. On a positive note, the government vowed to step up to support the economy. The People's Bank of China lowered its reserve requirement for banks to inject long-term liquidity to boost the healthy and stable development of financial markets. Hong Kong and Taiwanese stocks also fell.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the period since launch in December 2021. This was primarily driven by selected stocks in the industrials and health care sectors amid regulatory uncertainty, as well as a value rotation in Chinese markets. Shares in wind tower manufacturer Titan Wind Energy fell due to the high-growth valuation correction in the industrials sector. Inverters and energy storage systems maker Sungrow Power Supply slid amid rising costs of key raw materials. Conversely, leading domestic cosmetics group Proya gained, driven by resilient growth and margin expansion despite a challenging market environment. Shares in Bank of Ningbo rose on the back of earnings growth and excellent management execution, which ensures prudent credit underwriting amid rapid balance sheet expansion.

The manager continues to focus on China's onshore growth story, while seeking to contribute to the construction of a sustainable planet, sustainable lives and sustainable enterprises. Solar equipment manufacturer LONGi Green Energy Technology is preferred for its technology and cost advantages, which could help it to gain market share. Power automation company NARI Technology (A) is another key holding in the portfolio. It is a pioneer at the centre of China's energy reform and a leading performer in the environmental, social and governance (ESG) space given the nature of its business.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 94 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities fell over the period since inception. Tightening monetary policies in view of elevated inflation and geopolitical tensions amid Russia's attack on Ukraine weighed on markets in the latter part of the period. Nevertheless, stock prices were supported by the economic reopening and recovery themes, while encouraging corporate earnings in developed markets further lifted investor sentiment. Against this global backdrop, the UK outperformed other regional markets. From a sector perspective, energy companies rose as crude oil prices surged amid fears that the Russia-Ukraine conflict could disrupt energy supplies. Consumer staples, utilities and health care were also among the leading performers, while communication services and consumer discretionary names led the decliners.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the period since inception. Security selection in the metals & mining and interactive media & services sectors added value. However, selected positions in electrical equipment detracted the most from returns. At a stock level, Vale Indonesia Tbk, an Indonesia-based company primarily engaged in nickel mining, enhanced gains as nickel prices rose. The company expects its FY22 earnings to outperform, as China's easing of monetary policies is expected to lead to increased demand for industrial metals. On the downside, shares in sustainable building products company Azek were sold off due to weak investor sentiment in a rising interest rate environment.

The FF Sustainable Global Climate Solutions Fund is a global equity portfolio, designed to achieve long-term capital growth by investing in companies that enable global decarbonisation efforts. Superior investment opportunities are selected using bottom-up stock selection to identify companies with structural growth drivers, operating in industries with high barriers to entry and attractive competitive dynamics as a result of superior technological advantage or innovation. By applying a 360-degree lens to carbon reduction, the fund has the ability to invest across industries, regions and market capitalisations to find the best ideas from an alpha generation and carbon reduction prospective. The portfolio managers have identified more than 20 decarbonisation solutions, which are bucketed into five large groups: electrification of transport, clean power generation, industrial automation & digitalisation, infrastructure decarbonisation and consumer reuse.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 1,221 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities fell in US dollar terms over the review period, but rose in euro terms. Tightening monetary policies in view of elevated inflation and geopolitical tensions amid Russia's attack on Ukraine weighed on markets in the latter part of the period. The emergence of more infectious variants of COVID-19 as well as a resurgence in infections also held back gains earlier in the period. Nevertheless, stock prices were supported by the economic reopening and recovery themes, while encouraging corporate earnings in developed markets, coupled with progress on the roll-out of COVID-19 vaccines globally, further lifted investor sentiment. From a sector perspective, energy companies rose as crude oil prices surged amid fears that the Russia-Ukraine conflict could disrupt energy supplies. Consumer staples, utilities and health care were also among the leading performers, while communication services and consumer discretionary names led the decliners.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the year. Stock selection in the interactive media & services sector and an overweight stance in food products added value. However, selected holdings in the internet & direct marketing retail sector weighed on returns. At a stock level, Netflix was the leading detractor from performance over the period. The streaming major announced substantial subscriber losses in the first quarter of 2022 and an uncertain outlook going forward. Amazon weighed on returns as the e-commerce major reported disappointing earnings. On a positive note, shares in Swiss food group Nestle advanced as investors favoured fundamentally sound businesses with defensive qualities amid market volatility. Its shares also benefited after the company trimmed its stake in French beauty major L'Oreal, a deal that pleased investors on both sides, while keeping the ties between the two companies broadly intact.

The portfolio manager looks to invest in businesses with strong brands that have a demonstrated consumer moat reflected, for example, in superior pricing power, innovation and valuable intellectual property. The universe includes but is not limited to the consumer sectors. The fund is well positioned to capitalise on these trends and to provide investors with exposure to consumer brands across the entirety of the universe. In addition, the fund has no direct exposure to Russia or Ukraine. However, the manager continues to monitor the situation very closely to assess any indirect impact that the conflict may have on any of the portfolio holdings.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : EUR 278 MILLION

Manager's Overview

European markets declined (in US dollar terms) over the period. In the initial part of the period, a fall in new COVID-19 cases and an acceleration in vaccine rollouts buoyed equities. However, rising concerns around inflation, higher bond yields, supply chain bottlenecks and the impact of the Omicron variant of COVID-19 weighed on sentiment. Markets recovered in the second half of 2021, driven by strong quarterly earnings and increasing optimism over an economic recovery, but declined at the start of 2022 as geopolitical risks escalated sharply amid rising tensions between Russia and Ukraine. Risk aversion rose amid rising interest rate expectations to combat surging inflationary pressures, while China's stringent COVID-19 lockdown policy further dampened sentiment.

The fund generated negative returns and underperformed the index over the period. The underperformance was driven by both unfavourable positioning and weak stock selection. The underweight stance in consumer discretionary, coupled with selected holdings within communication services, detracted from returns. However, selected holdings within materials contributed to performance. At the stock level, the lack of exposure to Shell weighed on returns as the stock benefited from rising oil and gas prices. Some of these losses were offset by the holding in AstraZeneca after the company reported consensus beating first quarter earnings.

Short-term confidence is fragile given the elevated levels of inflation, heightened geopolitical risks amid the ongoing conflict in Ukraine, and supply chain bottlenecks that have been exacerbated by fresh COVID-19-related lockdowns in China. The evolving situation has complicated matters for the European Central Bank, which has the complicated task of balancing interest rate rises against the potential negative effect on growth. The managers are monitoring this very closely and stress testing company models for different scenarios. The fund is overweight the health care and information technology sectors, and underweight in energy and consumer staples. Portfolio positioning is a result of the managers' bottom-up stock selection process.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : EUR 121 MILLION

Manager's Overview

European smaller equities declined (in USD terms) over the period. In the initial part of the period, a fall in new COVID-19 cases and an acceleration in vaccine rollouts buoyed equities. However, rising concerns around inflation, higher bond yields, supply chain bottlenecks and the impact of the Omicron variant of COVID-19 weighed on sentiment. Markets recovered in the second half of 2021, driven by strong quarterly earnings and increasing optimism over an economic recovery, but declined at the start of 2022 as geopolitical risks escalated sharply amid rising tensions between Russia and Ukraine. Risk aversion rose amid rising interest rate expectations to combat surging inflationary pressures, while China's stringent COVID-19 lockdown policy further dampened sentiment.

The fund underperformed the index during the review period, due to disappointing sector allocation. Negative stock picking in materials including Aluflexpack and RHI Magnesita detracted the most from returns. Weaker performance of consumer discretionary stocks, particularly internet companies Desenio, Just Eat Takeaway and Bike24, held back returns. Some of these losses were partially offset by the strong performance of holdings in D'leteren and Watches of Switzerland. Positively, stock picking in technology and communication services supported performance. Shares in telecommunication businesses OTE (Greek Telecom) and Tele2 were among the leading contributors to relative returns.

The managers focus on identifying quality companies with under-appreciated growth characteristics in all phases of the market cycle, above average market returns, but with better balance sheets, and sensible valuation metrics. This is coupled with environmental, social and governance (ESG) analysis at the stock and sector levels to select companies that have best practices, high ESG scores and low controversy risks. The fund has large overweight positions in financials, consumer discretionary, communication services and technology, while being underweight in industrials, real estate, and health care.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : EUR 399 MILLION

Manager's Overview

European markets declined (in USD terms) over the period. In the initial part of the period, a decline in new COVID-19 cases and an acceleration in vaccine rollouts buoyed equities. However, rising concerns around inflation, higher bond yields, supply chain bottlenecks and the impact of the Omicron variant of COVID-19 weighed on sentiment. Markets recovered in the second half of 2021, driven by strong quarterly earnings and increasing optimism over an economic recovery, but declined at the start of 2022. Equities were weighed down as geopolitical risks escalated sharply amid rising tensions between Russia and Ukraine, which culminated in the Russian invasion on 24 February. Risk aversion rose amid expectations that the European Central Bank (ECB) would follow the US Federal Reserve and raise interest rates to combat surging inflationary pressures, while China's stringent COVID-19 lockdown policy further dampened sentiment.

The fund underperformed the index over the review period, driven by the overweight position in the consumer discretionary sector. The bias against energy, however, pared gains. At a stock level, Novo Nordisk, a leading pure-play biopharmaceutical company advanced on strong earnings and guidance upgrades. Information service business RELX also added value as its outlook pointed to strong growth in revenue and profits in 2022. Not holding TotalEnergies was a key detractor from relative performance as strong oil prices supported the stock. Shares in payment processor Worldline fell sharply as its third quarter results were poorly received.

While the fund's core objective is to outperform the reference index (MSCI EMU), it has an additional focus on sustainability and aims to deliver sustainable positive societal impacts. The near-term outlook is, however, highly uncertain given the ongoing military activity by Russia in Ukraine. The portfolio managers continue to focus on quality growth companies that have attractive fundamentals and superior environmental, social, and governance (ESG) characteristics. As a result of bottom-up stock selection, the fund has an overweight allocation to the information technology, consumer discretionary and financials sectors.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 245 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities fell over the review period. Initially, a decline in new COVID-19 cases buoyed equities. Strong quarterly earnings and increasing optimism over an economic recovery supported markets in the second half of 2021. However, rising concerns around inflation, supply chain bottlenecks and the impact of the Omicron variant weighed on sentiment. The start of 2022 has proved challenging amid significant sector and style rotations against a backdrop of rising inflation and interest rates. The war in Ukraine triggered a sharp rise in the cost of energy, further fuelling inflation and inviting a more hawkish tone from most central banks.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the period. Shares in online grocer Ocado declined as increased risks of a global recession weighed on investor sentiment. The position in 1Life Healthcare underperformed due to rising general and administrative expenses. The holding in communications provider Ericsson declined after it revealed that it was involved in bribery/corruption in Iraq from 2011 to 2019.

The position in Marvell Technology Group advanced on the back of robust demand for chips, which are used in several fast-growing markets such as fifth-generation (5G) wireless networks. The holding in communications equipment company Juniper Networks declined. Shares in the company were under pressure as investors rotated towards defensive stocks.

The fund invests in the enablers, networks and innovators, primarily in the communication services and information technology sectors that are driving advances in Future Connectivity. The Sustainable Future Connectivity universe has benefited from stronger growth than the broader market, and the fund aims to invest in companies with even better growth potential than the thematic universe. The fund exploits this theme with a deep understanding of underlying technologies, new business models and a global investment perspective. A focus on sustainability forms a key part of this process, as does digital ethics as it relates to internet businesses in particular.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 504 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities performed negatively over the review period. The emergence of more infectious variants of COVID-19 as well as a resurgence in infections held back gains. Tightening monetary policies in view of elevated inflation and geopolitical tensions amid Russia's attack on Ukraine also weighed on markets, particularly later in the period. Against this backdrop, the UK outperformed other regional markets. From a sector perspective, energy companies rose as crude oil prices surged amid fears that the Russia-Ukraine conflict could disrupt energy supplies. Consumer staples, utilities and health care were also among the leading performers, while communication services and consumer discretionary names led the decliners.

The fund delivered positive returns and outperformed the comparative index over the year due to its continued defensive bias and focus on owning high quality, resilient companies. Holdings in industrials, combined with the bias against the consumer discretionary and communication services sectors, contributed the most to relative performance. At a stock level, professional services companies RELX and Wolters Kluwer performed very well. Both companies reported solid first half results and raised their full year guidance. The former's organic growth rates accelerated to above historical levels. Above normal organic growth is likely to continue, and its profits are expected to grow faster than revenues. Growth in the latter was supported by a rebound in transactional revenues and good margin uplift.

The fund focusses on sustainable businesses with strong environmental, social, and governance (ESG) characteristics. The manager maintains a defensive strategy and remains well diversified on both regional and sector counts as a result of the strategy's focus on companies with resilient returns and strong balance sheets. The largest absolute and relative sector weighting is to financials, with a focus on typically higher quality, defensive businesses with low balance sheet risk. Industrials is another significant overweight. The fund's considerable weighting to the technology sector is made up of technology hardware and software.

Manager's Overview

Japanese equities advanced over the 12-month period in yen terms. Share price gains were supported by strong earnings momentum and domestic political developments, while rising vaccination rates lifted investor sentiment. However, the Japanese government's decision to extend the state of emergency amid rising concerns over the spread of COVID-19 weighed on sentiment earlier in the year. Concerns over Russia's invasion of Ukraine, its spill over effect on the global economy and broadening inflationary risks, as well as increasing interest rates capped gains in the second half of the period. Sentiment was also hit by fears about the damage that the Omicron variant of COVID-19 could inflict on the economy. Earnings results were favourable, generally coming in ahead of expectations, and the market reacted positively to companies that announced upward revisions and increased dividends. Meanwhile, the yen weakened against the US dollar, benefiting export-oriented companies. At a sector level, energy and financials were the leading gainers. Conversely, communication services and consumer discretionary names were the weakest performers.

The fund outperformed the comparative index over the year. Strong stock selection in the land transportation and electric appliances sectors added value, though holdings in chemicals were among the notable detractors from performance. In the land transportation sector, the position in logistics company Hitachi Transport System was the standout contributor to returns. Its share price surged on reports that parent company Hitachi would sell most of its stake to US-based private equity firm KKR. Non-life insurer Tokio Marine attracted attention for its strong and stable shareholder returns. Personal goods company Kao disappointed with its latest quarterly results, as the effects of write downs, inventory losses and rising input costs weighed on its earnings.

The fund focuses on sustainable growth companies with strong environmental, social and governance (ESG) characteristics. The manager utilises bottom-up analysis to select quality companies with high sustainable growth, above average returns and strong balance sheets. This is coupled with ESG analysis at the stock and sector level to select companies that follow best practices and sustainable development, and have high ESG scores and low controversy risks. It is a research-driven approach that leverages Fidelity's proprietary fundamental and ESG research.

Manager's Overview

US equities declined over the 12-month review period. Markets were firmly in recovery mode in the second quarter of 2021. However, the emergence of the Omicron variant of COVID-19 somewhat diminished sentiment. Subsequently, equities declined sharply in the first quarter of 2022, following the Russian invasion of Ukraine and the US Federal Reserve's (Fed) interest rate hike. The Fed indicated that it may raise interest rates at a faster pace to combat persistently high inflation.

As of 26 October 2021, the fund's investment objective changed to reflect its repurposing from a core US equity strategy into part of Fidelity's Sustainable Family of Funds. Its name changed from Fidelity Funds – American Diversified Fund to Fidelity Funds – Sustainable US Equity Fund, with performance achieved under different circumstances.

Overall, the fund underperformed the comparative index over the period. The underweight position in Apple was detrimental to returns, after it released record earnings for the fourth quarter of 2021. The position in Etsy fell after high levels of volatility meant that investors rotated into more defensive names. Shares in Salesforce also slid as investor sentiment declined due to rising inflation. On a positive note, the position in streaming service Netflix added value on the back of consistent increases in earnings and viewers, and received a significant boost from the pandemic. The holding in UnitedHealth rallied after it reported strong earnings. Revenue growth was robust in its Medicare Advantage and Optum Health offerings. Shares in Facebook rose after the social media major beat advertising sales expectations and posted impressive quarterly earnings in 2021.

As part of Fidelity's Sustainable Family, the fund exhibits enhanced sustainable characteristics. The fund is differentiated due to its high active share, focused on owning sustainable enablers. The strategy aims to use sustainable investing to drive positive change, utilising the strength and depth of Fidelity's proprietary research team. The portfolio managers aim to generate consistent, predictable excess returns over time. The environmental, social and governance (ESG) thematic is not only integrated, but integral to the selection and construction of the fund.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 2,086 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities fell over the review period. Tightening monetary policies in view of elevated inflation and geopolitical tensions amid Russia's attack on Ukraine weighed on markets in the latter part of the period. Nevertheless, stock prices were supported by the economic reopening and recovery themes, while encouraging corporate earnings in developed markets, coupled with progress on the roll-out of COVID-19 vaccines globally, further lifted investor sentiment. Against this global backdrop, the UK outperformed other regional markets. From a sector perspective, energy companies rose as crude oil prices surged amid fears that the Russia-Ukraine conflict could disrupt energy supplies. Consumer staples, utilities and health care were also among the leading performers, while communication services and consumer discretionary names led the decliners.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the year. Security selection in the machinery sector and the overweight stance in water utilities added value. However, selected positions in building products and chemicals detracted the most from returns. At a stock level, China Lesso Group, a manufacturer of home building materials, was the key detractor from performance. The company missed its FY21 earnings (due to high cost inflation) and announced a surprise move in its capital allocation. Elsewhere, shares in sustainable building products company Azek were sold off due to weak investor sentiment in a rising interest rate environment. Encouragingly, water treatment solutions company Evoqua Water Technologies contributed strongly to returns as its organic revenue growth was driven by strong sales and enhanced pricing. This, combined with the completion of its acquisition of Mar Cor, led the company to raise its FY2022 revenue guidance.

The portfolio managers look to maintain a high purity thematic fund, which seeks to deliver long-term capital growth and contribute to the sustainability of global water and waste practices. The fund is balanced across both the water and waste sectors as a result of bottom-up stock selection. The managers believe the water and waste management sectors are driven by long-term megatrends. These include urbanisation and population growth, growing consumption, an ageing infrastructure, climate change and responsible resource consumption.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : CHF 311 MILLION

Manager's Overview

European markets fell (in US dollar terms) over the period. In the initial part of the period, a fall in new COVID-19 cases and an acceleration in vaccine rollouts buoyed equities. Strong quarterly earnings and increasing optimism over an economic recovery supported markets in the second half of 2021. However, rising concerns around inflation, higher bond yields, supply chain bottlenecks and the impact of the Omicron variant weighed on sentiment. The start of 2022 has proved challenging amid significant sector and style rotations against a backdrop of rising inflation and interest rates. The war in Ukraine triggered a sharp rise in the cost of energy, further fuelling inflation and inviting a more hawkish tone from the main central banks.

The fund underperformed the index over the review period, driven by the overweight exposure to the industrials and information technology sectors. While stock picking across most sectors pared gains, holdings in industrials added notable value. At a stock level, the structural underweight stance in Roche hampered performance as defensive large-cap bio-pharmaceutical companies were more resilient during the sell-off seen at the start of 2022. Shares also gained after Roche announced that it would repurchase the stake owned by Novartis. The holding in life sciences tools business Tecan pared gains. Encouragingly, the position in hearing aid manufacturer Sonova was the most notable contributor to returns, benefiting from consensus-beating results for the first half of 2021.

The fund continues to focus on companies with high quality business models and management teams. It maintains a sizable allocation to the health care, industrials, financials and materials sectors in absolute terms. Relative to the index, the fund has an underweight stance in consumer staples and health care, and an overweight exposure to industrials and financials. The manager is cautious given the uncertainty caused by the war and the inflation environment. He believes that the likelihood of a recession is rising rapidly, as sanctions are unlikely to reverse even if the situation in Ukraine stabilises.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 209 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Thai equities declined over a period marked by rising volatility and a challenging market environment. Concerns over the worsening geo-political situation in Ukraine and expectations for substantially tighter US monetary policy weighed on investor sentiment. Against this backdrop, the information technology sector was the leading performer, while materials was the key laggard.

The fund underperformed the index over the review period. Security selection in the communication services sector held back gains. Leading internet company SEA slid due to concerns around a deceleration in its gaming revenue, and the overall market rotation from growth to value stocks. However, long-term drivers remain intact, with e-commerce revenue growth exceeding expectations and management's focus on profitable growth. The lack of exposure to Jasmine Technology Solutions detracted from relative returns. It gained investor attention due to its entry into bitcoin mining, but its valuations are already prohibitively expensive. Encouragingly, the inflationary environment acted as a tailwind for financials, including SCB X, which is the result of Siam Commercial Bank's partnership with digital consultancy Publicis Sapient. Shares in PTT Exploration and Production gained in line with rising oil and gas prices due to geopolitical tensions and supply concerns. PTT remains a core holding in this space, albeit with a more integrated model, and still trades on very undemanding valuations.

The manager pursues a well-balanced approach to bottom-up stock selection, seeking to identify opportunities across various stages of the industry lifecycle (i.e., in both "growth" and "mature" industries), and regardless of the sensitivity to business cycles (i.e., in both "defensive" and "cyclical" industries). This approach is necessary in Thailand given the limited market breadth and provides superior investment results versus chasing a specific theme or narrow style bias. The fund is currently overweight in energy, financials, consumer staples, health care and real estate due to the alpha potential in these sectors.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : GBP 108 MILLION

Manager's Overview

UK equities posted strong returns over the 12-month period. Investor sentiment remained buoyant for the most part, propelled by a spate of merger and acquisition activity, alongside expectations for continued earnings strength. However, the emergence of the Delta variant of COVID-19 kept markets in check, as fresh lockdowns were introduced in the country. While the monetary policy was set to remain accommodative, a combination of persistent supply chain bottlenecks and rising fuel costs led to concerns around longer lasting inflationary risks. With inflationary concerns persisting into the fourth quarter, most central banks appeared poised to 'ease off the gas'. The Bank of England raised interest rates three times to 0.75% in March 2022. However, 2022 saw market volatility return, reflecting a reappraisal of interest rate expectations and Russia's invasion of Ukraine. The sanctions imposed on Russia and disruptions resulting from the conflict pushed commodity prices to extreme levels, exacerbating concerns around soaring inflation and leaving central banks with few options but to tighten their monetary policies towards the end of the period. In this environment, energy stocks led the gainers, benefiting from a recovery in demand and tight supply.

The fund recorded positive returns but underperformed the comparative index over the year. The overweight stance in the consumer discretionary sector detracted from returns, as did stock selection in the health care and real estate sectors. Strong stock selection in the financials sector contributed to performance. The underweight stance in expensively valued health care group AstraZeneca weighed on relative returns as investors preferred defensives amid increasing volatility in 2022. German property group Adler was among the notable detractors from performance amid continuing concerns over corporate governance. UK aerospace equipment supplier Meggitt was among the key contributors to returns. Its shares rallied sharply following a bidding war, with shareholders eventually giving the green light to a £6.3 billion takeover by US group Parker Hannifin.

Given the deteriorating economic environment, the portfolio has become more cautiously positioned over recent months, with a less pronounced pro-cyclical bias, and gearing levels have drifted lower. At current levels, portfolio holdings are very attractively valued for businesses that can grow and generate good returns and have strong balance sheets.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 4,970 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Developed world equities performed positively (in euro terms) as the ongoing economic recovery provided support. Encouraging corporate earnings in developed markets, coupled with progress on the roll-out of COVID-19 vaccines globally, further supported investor sentiment. However, the emergence of more infectious variants of COVID-19 as well as a resurgence in infections held back gains. Tightening monetary policies in view of elevated inflation and geopolitical tensions amid Russia's attack on Ukraine also weighed on markets in the latter part of the period. Against this backdrop, the UK outperformed other regional markets. From a sector perspective, energy companies rose as crude oil prices surged amid fears that the Russia-Ukraine conflict could disrupt energy supplies. Consumer staples, utilities and health care were also among the leading performers, while communication services and consumer discretionary names led the decliners.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the period. While information technology (IT) names detracted from returns, selected health care and energy holdings gained on positive news flow. At a stock level, Swedish communications equipment business Ericsson LM declined following a recent rating downgrade. Japanese electronic components manufacturer TDK came under pressure due to concerns over potential headwinds in the smartphone market. Koninklijke Philips had a respiratory care product recall that weighed on its share price performance. On a positive note, pharmaceuticals distribution company AmerisourceBergen added value on the back of its robust US health care solutions business and product launches. Within energy, the holdings in Marathon Petroleum and Baker Hughes tracked crude oil prices higher.

At a sector level, the portfolio management team increased the exposure to the health care sector, with holdings in quality franchises across equipment & services providers, medical devices, biotechnology, clinical research organisations and some pharmaceuticals names. The portfolio management team remains cautious in the IT sector, but looks for opportunities to increase exposure to software and subscription models. At a regional level, the allocation to Continental Europe as well as to the UK and Japan was reduced, while new holdings with exposure to North America were purchased.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 352 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Regional equities remained subdued over the year, which was marked by rising volatility and a turbulent market environment globally. Investors remained cautious amid uncertainty around the fluid COVID-19 situation, an earlier than expected increase in interest rates by the US Federal Reserve (Fed), rising inflationary pressures and, more recently, concerns surrounding the Russia-Ukraine conflict and its spill over effect on global markets. A resurgence in COVID-19 cases and a slowdown in consumption in China also weighed on sentiment. Most emerging countries within the Asian region declined over the period.

The fund outperformed the comparative index over the year. The exposure to China Overseas Land & Investments advanced on gradual policy easing in the real estate sector. The company reported strong growth in its revenue and increased its dividend pay-out, implying confidence in its cash flows. Improving investor confidence, boosted by the government's promise to support the property sector, also buoyed its shares. The exposure to leasing company Chailease Holding attracted investor interest, as news that it is ramping up its fundraising capacity was well received by investors. The position in India's grid network utility Power Grid Corporation of India enhanced gains due to its good growth prospects and attractive dividend yields. Conversely, Dairy Farm International declined amid concerns around a slowdown in growth, notably in ambient yoghurt and milk beverages. Investors were also concerned about rising raw milk costs. Shares in Kao Corporation came under pressure as it struggled to pass on increasing raw material costs to customers.

The manager looks for companies with strong business moats and credible capital allocation policies, which should offer investors compounding returns and dividend payments. The preference is towards companies with a sustainable dividend stream that are supported by strong balance sheets and predictable cash flows. Chailease Holdings, a speciality lessor in small and medium enterprise (SME) financing, is a preferred position in the portfolio. Uni President Enterprises is favoured for its attractive valuation and robust business model. China Yangtze Power is another preferred holding. It is the largest global hydropower utility with a strong balance sheet and stable dividend policy.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : EUR 274 MILLION

Manager's Overview

European markets were positive over the period. In the initial part of the period, a fall in new COVID-19 cases and an acceleration in vaccine rollouts buoyed equities. However, rising concerns around inflation, higher bond yields, supply chain bottlenecks and the impact of the Omicron variant of COVID-19 weighed on sentiment. Markets recovered in the second half of 2021, driven by strong quarterly earnings and increasing optimism over an economic recovery, but declined at the start of 2022 as geopolitical risks escalated sharply amid rising tensions between Russia and Ukraine. Risk aversion rose amid rising interest rate expectations to combat surging inflationary pressures, while China's stringent COVID-19 lockdown policy further dampened sentiment.

The fund outperformed the index over the period. The manager's focus on owning high quality companies added value. Stock picking in the insurance and commercial & professional services sectors contributed the most to returns. Energy stocks were the standout market performers, supported by rising oil prices as increasing demand outpaced fresh supply. Against this backdrop, the holding in Lundin Energy enhanced gains. It also benefited from strong 2021 results, despite modest fourth quarter numbers.

The fund is defensively positioned. The manager retains a longstanding overweight in financials, where high quality stocks, primarily in the insurance and diversified financials space, are well represented. The fund has an overweight allocation to diverse industrials, with a focus on capital goods and information services companies. Other large sector positions are in health care, consumer staples and utilities. These are more classically 'defensive' businesses where the manager seeks diversified companies that operate in strong end markets. Meanwhile, the portfolio retains an underweight stance in the information technology and consumer discretionary sectors, where valuations are stretched.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : EUR 5 MILLION

Manager's Overview

European markets were positive over the period. In the initial part of the period, a fall in new COVID-19 cases and an acceleration in vaccine rollouts buoyed equities. However, rising concerns around inflation, higher bond yields, supply chain bottlenecks and the impact of the Omicron variant of COVID-19 weighed on sentiment. Markets recovered in the second half of 2021, driven by strong quarterly earnings and increasing optimism over an economic recovery, but declined at the start of 2022 as geopolitical risks escalated sharply amid rising tensions between Russia and Ukraine. Risk aversion rose amid rising interest rate expectations to combat surging inflationary pressures, while China's stringent COVID-19 lockdown policy further dampened sentiment.

The fund recorded positive returns and outperformed the index over the period. The manager's focus on owning high quality companies proved beneficial. Stock picking in telecommunication services and commercial & professional services contributed the most to performance. At a stock level, RELX delivered solid nine-month earnings with organic growth rates at above normal levels and marginally improved its full-year guidance. Elsewhere, French pharmaceuticals company Sanofi benefited from its defensive earnings profile and was a strong contributor to performance.

The fund balances the need for quality, income (level, resilience and growth prospects) and value. The portfolio is defensively positioned. The manager retains a longstanding overweight in financials, where high quality stocks, primarily in the insurance and diversified financials space, are well represented. The fund has an overweight allocation to diverse industrials, with a focus on capital goods and information services companies. Other large sector positions are in health care, consumer staples and utilities. These are more classically 'defensive' businesses, where the manager seeks diversified companies that operate in strong end markets. Meanwhile, the portfolio retains an underweight stance in the information technology and consumer discretionary sectors, where valuations are stretched.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 11,020 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities performed negatively over the review period. The emergence of more infectious variants of COVID-19 as well as a resurgence in infections held back gains. Tightening monetary policies in view of elevated inflation and geopolitical tensions amid Russia's attack on Ukraine also weighed on markets, particularly later in the period. Against this backdrop, the UK outperformed other regional markets. From a sector perspective, energy companies rose as crude oil prices surged amid fears that the Russia-Ukraine conflict could disrupt energy supplies. Consumer staples, utilities and health care were also among the leading performers, while communication services and consumer discretionary names led the decliners.

The fund delivered negative returns over the period but was able to contain its drawdown in a falling market due to its continued defensive bias and focus on owning high quality, resilient companies. The bias against the consumer discretionary and communication services sectors contributed the most to relative performance. At a stock level, professional services companies RELX and Wolters Kluwer performed very well. Both companies reported solid first half results and raised their full-year guidance. The former's organic growth rates accelerated to above historical levels. Above normal organic growth is likely to continue, and its profits are expected to grow faster than revenues. Growth in the latter was supported by rebounding transactional revenues and good margin uplift.

The portfolio remains defensively positioned. The manager maintains a strong quality bias in the portfolio and owns predominantly defensive business models with robust balance sheets at attractive valuations. From a sector perspective, the fund has key holdings in the consumer staples, non-life insurance, financial exchanges, pharmaceuticals and other sectors with limited correlation to economic growth. In the more cyclical parts of the market, the fund holds a number of mature businesses in the technology space that meet its investment criteria. The manager also has positions in high-quality industrials businesses.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 153 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities performed positively (in euro terms) as the ongoing economic recovery provided support. Encouraging corporate earnings in developed markets, coupled with progress on the roll-out of COVID-19 vaccines globally, supported investor sentiment. However, the emergence of more infectious variants of COVID-19 as well as a resurgence in infections held back gains. Tightening monetary policies in view of elevated inflation and geopolitical tensions amid Russia's attack on Ukraine also weighed on markets, particularly later in the period. Against this backdrop, the UK outperformed other regional markets. From a sector perspective, energy companies rose as crude oil prices surged amid fears that the Russia-Ukraine conflict could disrupt energy supplies. Consumer staples, utilities and health care were also among the leading performers, while communication services and consumer discretionary names led the decliners.

The fund delivered positive returns over the period and outperformed the index due to the managers' focus on owning high quality, resilient companies. The bias against consumer discretionary and communication services, combined with the overweight stance in health care contributed the most to relative returns. At a stock level, the holding in immunotherapy pharmaceutical company Bristol Myers Squibb added value on robust fourth quarter earnings, driven by the strong performance of its Eliquis, Abiraterone and Yervoy drugs, as well as the US$5 billion share buyback announced in the first quarter. Peer Sanofi also benefited from its defensive earnings profile and contributed strongly to performance.

The Fidelity Funds – Global Infrastructure Fund changed its characteristics and was repurposed to Fidelity Funds – Global Dividend Plus Fund on 19 April 2021. The fund aims to achieve income with the potential for some capital growth. The income of the portfolio is enhanced using an overwrite strategy whereby call options are written on holdings in the portfolio. The fund is defensively positioned. The managers maintain a strong quality bias and own companies with robust balance sheets, attractive valuations and resilient income generation. The fund has key holdings in the consumer staples, insurance, diversified financials, pharmaceuticals and other sectors with limited correlation to economic growth.

Manager's Overview

Global equities performed negatively over the review period. The emergence of more infectious variants of COVID-19 as well as a resurgence in infections held back gains. Tightening monetary policies in view of elevated inflation and geopolitical tensions amid Russia's attack on Ukraine also weighed on markets, particularly later in the period. Against this backdrop, the UK outperformed other regional markets. From a sector perspective, energy companies rose as crude oil prices surged amid fears that the Russia-Ukraine conflict could disrupt energy supplies. Consumer staples, utilities and health care were also among the leading performers, while communication services and consumer discretionary names led the decliners.

The fund delivered positive returns and outperformed a falling market due to its continued defensive bias and focus on owning high quality, resilient companies. Holdings in industrials, combined with the bias against the consumer discretionary and communication services sectors, contributed the most to relative performance. At a stock level, professional services companies RELX and Wolters Kluwer performed very well. Both companies reported solid first half results and raised their full year guidance. The former's organic growth rates accelerated to above historical levels. Above normal organic growth is likely to continue, and its profits are expected to grow faster than revenues. Growth in the latter was supported by a rebound in transactional revenues and good margin uplift.

The manager maintains a defensive strategy and remains well diversified on both regional and sector counts as a result of the strategy's focus on companies with resilient returns and strong balance sheets. The largest absolute and relative sector weighting is to financials, with a focus on typically higher quality, defensive businesses with low balance sheet risk. Industrials is another significant overweight. The fund's considerable weighting to the technology sector is made up of technology hardware as well as software.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 120 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Asia Pacific ex Japan equities fell over the period. Global central banks' policy normalisation in view of elevated inflation, Russia's attack on Ukraine and COVID-19 related challenges weighed on markets globally. Against this backdrop, equities in China, South Korea, Taiwan, Thailand and Singapore ended lower. Within fixed income, US dollar denominated Asian high yield bonds came under pressure amid risks in the Chinese property sector. US dollar denominated Asian investment grade bonds also fell as US Treasury yields rose.

The fund posted negative returns over the period, but delivered income in-line with its objectives. Chinese and Asian high yield bonds weighed significantly on returns due to concerns over tightening regulations and default risks in the Chinese property sector. Positions in Asian and Chinese equities detracted from performance, partly due to the worsening COVID-19 situation in China. Meanwhile, Chinese government bonds mitigated some losses. Selected alternative holdings such as infrastructure and shipping also supported returns.

The managers are positive on opportunities in Asia given the region's strong fundamentals. That said, they remain cautious and are cognisant of risks, particularly geopolitical issues, tightening monetary policies globally and COVID-19 related uncertainty. Overall, the allocation to equities was increased. The managers added to Asian defensive equities, which have a substantial position in the portfolio. The exposure to ASEAN equities was raised to benefit from an economic re-opening in the region. A holding in Japanese stocks was purchased as valuations are cheap and the policy backdrop remains supportive. Although the exposure to Chinese high yield bonds was reduced, the fund has significant allocation to Asian and Chinese high yield bonds for their cheap valuations and upside potential over the medium term. Chinese government bonds are favoured due to their reasonable yields and defensive characteristics. The fund also holds several alternative strategies in view of their diversification benefits.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : EUR 579 MILLION

Manager's Overview

European equities gained somewhat in euro terms over the year, while European bonds posted negative returns as credit spreads widened. Equity markets were supported by vaccine rollouts and strong quarterly earnings, but heightened geopolitical risks centred around Russia and Ukraine, coupled with rising interest rate expectations to combat surging inflationary pressures and China's stringent COVID-19 lockdown policy dampened sentiment in the latter part of the period.

The fund delivered negative returns over the year under review, but distributed natural income in line with its objective. High yield and investment grade bonds weighed on performance, as did the allocation to emerging market debt. Equities, however, contributed to absolute returns, as did the allocation to non-traditional assets such as loans and infrastructure. Equity market hedges supported performance during periods of market volatility, but held back gains over the year as a whole.

Persistently high inflation, hawkish shocks from central banks, a squeeze on disposable income in the hands of consumers and the impact of China's lockdown on supply chains and growth remain key risks for markets. The managers remain cautious and reduced equity risk, while adding to high quality duration assets in the portfolio. More recently, they are taking the opportunity to selectively add back to risk where they believe asset classes have sold off significantly and are offering some asymmetric risk/return upside potential. Towards the end of the year under review, they increased European equity hedges and purchased a UK equity hedge. They reduced the allocation to enhanced income and financials equities given growth concerns. The position in European high yield bonds was reduced and the holding in hybrid bonds was increased. The managers added to emerging market local currency debt given evidence of policy easing in China. Later, they increased the position in emerging market hard currency debt, which provides exposure to commodity exporting countries. They also added to European investment grade bonds following a rise in yields, as well as to selected alternatives holdings. A small position in cash was also added to the portfolio.

Global equities fell over the review period. Tightening monetary policies in view of elevated inflation and geopolitical tensions amid Russia's attack on Ukraine weighed on markets in the latter part of the period. The emergence of more infectious variants of COVID-19, as well as a resurgence in infections also held back gains earlier in the period. Nevertheless, stock prices were supported by the economic reopening and recovery themes, coupled with progress on the roll-out of COVID-19 vaccines globally. Fixed income markets posted negative returns over the period, amid increasing monetary policy concerns and persistent inflation dynamics. Sovereign yields rose to multi-year highs and yield curves flattened as investors were increasingly concerned about the impact of tighter monetary policies on global growth prospects. Meanwhile, corporate bonds posted negative returns as credit spreads widened.

Fidelity Funds - Global Multi Asset Tactical Defensive Fund was re-purposed into Fidelity Funds - Global Multi Asset Defensive Fund in May 2021. The fund now aims to achieve a better downside profile versus a blend of 20% MSCI All Country World Net Total Return EUR Index and 80% Barclays Global Aggregate EUR Hedged Index on a rolling three-year basis. This is an objective and not a guarantee. The fund does not use a comparative index for performance purposes. The fund generated negative returns over the review period. From the repurpose date to the end of April 2022, the Core component of the portfolio detracted from absolute returns. In particular, the allocation to investment grade fixed income suffered as a result of the rise in government bond yields and the widening of credit spreads. The Defensive component of the portfolio also ended lower. The Alpha component, particularly the exposure to commodities, had a positive impact on returns. The allocation to investment grade bonds within the Core component was reduced over the period, while the allocation to the Alpha and Defensive components was increased.

Manager's Overview

Global equities fell over the period. Tightening monetary policies amid elevated inflation, Russia's attack on Ukraine and COVID-19 related challenges weighed on equities. Meanwhile, an ongoing global economic recovery and encouraging corporate earnings in developed markets provided support. Global bond markets posted negative returns. Government bond yields rose to multi-year highs and yield curves flattened on concerns over the impact of tighter monetary policies on growth prospects. Corporate bonds posted negative returns. Credit spreads widened as markets factored in the scaling back of central banks' policy support, uncertainty around the pandemic, risks in the Chinese property sector and the impact of the war in Ukraine.

The fund generated negative returns over the period. Asia Pacific ex Japan equities weighed on returns, partly due to concerns over the resurgence in COVID-19 cases and lockdowns in China. European equities hampered performance as geopolitical and economic risks in the region escalated. US and Japanese equities also hurt returns. Meanwhile, certain holdings in commodity export-centric markets such as Brazil, Latin America, Australia and Indonesia benefited from a rise in commodity prices. Within fixed income, global high-quality bonds and Chinese high yield bonds detracted from performance. Nonetheless, Chinese government bonds mitigated some of these losses and protected the portfolio during market downturns.

The managers have defensively positioned the fund amid downside risks to global growth. Geopolitical tensions, tightening financial conditions and COVID-19 related uncertainty are likely to present headwinds. Currently, the managers prefer quality companies trading at reasonable valuations and are cautious on certain high growth areas trading at expensive valuations. They also favour markets that are relatively insulated from the Russia-Ukraine conflict and that can benefit from an economic reopening and supportive commodity prices. Overall, the managers continue to dynamically allocate assets across asset classes, sectors and regions, with the aim to provide long-term capital growth across market cycles.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 115 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities and government bonds were lower over the review period. Concerns centred around COVID-19 held back gains early in the period. Later, tightening monetary policies in view of elevated inflation and geopolitical tensions amid Russia's attack on Ukraine weighed on markets. Government bond yields rose to multi-year highs and yield curves flattened across the globe. Corporate and high yield bonds also declined.

The fund was repurposed into the Fidelity Funds – Global Multi Asset Growth & Income fund in May 2021. It generated negative returns over the year under review. High yield bonds were the largest detractors from returns. In particular, concerns around the property sector impacted the performance of Asian high yield bonds. Emerging market debt and investment grade bonds weighed on returns, as did positions in equities. Meanwhile, the allocation to non-traditional assets, such as infrastructure, added value. Equity market hedges supported returns during periods of market volatility, but detracted from performance over the year as a whole.

Persistently high inflation, hawkish shocks from central banks, a squeeze on disposable income in the hands of consumers and the impact of China's lockdown on supply chains and growth remain key risks for markets. The managers remain cautious and reduced equity risk, particularly that centred on Europe, and began adding to high quality duration assets in the portfolio. More recently, they took the opportunity to selectively add back to risk where they believe asset classes have sold off significantly and are offering some asymmetric risk/return upside potential. Towards the end of the year under review, they increased equity hedges and reduced the allocation to European and global equities as well as financials given growth concerns. The position in Asian high yield bonds was also reduced. Instead, the managers added to emerging market hard currency debt, which provides exposure to commodity exporting countries. Chinese government bonds remain a key defensive holding in the portfolio, although the managers took some profits towards the end of the period. Meanwhile, they purchased 30-year US Treasuries and added to US investment grade bonds following a rise in yields. The managers added to alternatives that offer diversification benefits and attractive yields and also added a small position in cash.

Manager's Overview

Global equities and government bonds declined over the period. Concerns centred around COVID-19 held back gains early in the period. Later, tightening monetary policies in view of elevated inflation and geopolitical tensions amid Russia's attack on Ukraine weighed on markets. Government bond yields rose to multi-year highs and yield curves flattened across the globe. Corporate and high yield bonds also declined.

The fund generated negative returns but distributed natural income in line with its objective. High yield bonds were the largest detractors from returns. Concerns around the property sector impacted the performance of Asian high yield bonds, while European high yield bonds fell due to geopolitical tensions centred on the region. Emerging market debt and investment grade bonds weighed on returns, as did positions in equities. Meanwhile, the allocation to non-traditional assets such as infrastructure and loans added value. Equity market hedges supported returns during periods of market volatility, but detracted from performance over the year as a whole.

Towards the end of the year under review, they increased European equity hedges and sold European equities, rotating into Asian equities. Financials and global equity holdings were trimmed in the latter part of the period, as was the allocation to US high yield bonds. Instead, the managers added to emerging market hard currency debt, which provides exposure to commodity exporting countries. Chinese government bonds remain a key defensive holding in the portfolio. The managers also purchased positions in 30-year US Treasuries and in a strategy that is mainly exposed to UK government bonds (Gilts). They also added to the position in US investment grade bonds. The managers raised the allocation to alternatives that offer diversification benefits and attractive yields.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 19 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Greater China equities fell over the period. Global central banks' policy tightening due to inflation concerns and Russia's attack on Ukraine weighed on markets globally. Against this backdrop, Chinese and Hong Kong equities ended lower amid economic uncertainties in China, US-China tensions and a resurgence in COVID-19 cases. Taiwanese stocks also fell in view of weak global cues. Within fixed income, US dollar denominated Chinese high yield bonds posted negative returns due to intensified risks in the country's property space. US dollar denominated Chinese investment grade bonds fell as US Treasury yields rose.

The fund posted negative returns over the period, but delivered income in-line with its objectives. Equities were the key detractors from returns, led by Chinese consumer stocks. Greater China equities and Chinese value equities also weighed on performance, as the outbreak of the Omicron variant of COVID-19 resulted in lockdowns in several Chinese cities. Within fixed income, Chinese and Asian high yield bonds fell in view of tightening regulations and default risks in the Chinese property sector. Meanwhile, Chinese government bonds mitigated some losses. Selected alternative holdings such as infrastructure and shipping also supported returns.

The managers are positive on the Greater China market. Policy tightening in China has passed its peak and its prospects have strengthened as authorities focus on balancing growth with sustainability. That said, the managers are cautious due to near-term risks, such as geopolitical issues, tightening monetary policies globally and COVID-19 related challenges. Overall, the fund has high conviction in Chinese consumer stocks and greater China equities, as the asset class is expected to benefit from policy easing in China. The fund retained significant exposure to Chinese high yield bonds for their cheap valuations and upside potential over the medium term. Chinese government bonds are favoured due to their reasonable yields and defensive characteristics. Additionally, several alternative strategies are held for diversification benefits.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 92 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities and government bonds were lower over the review period. Concerns centred around COVID-19 held back gains early in the period. Later, tightening monetary policies in view of elevated inflation and geopolitical tensions amid Russia's attack on Ukraine weighed on markets. Government bond yields rose to multi-year highs and yield curves flattened across the globe. Corporate and high yield bonds also declined.

The fund was repurposed to a sustainable fund in October 2021 and is categorised as SFDR Article 8. It generated negative returns over the year under review, but distributed natural income in line with its objective. Over the period since repurpose, the allocation to investment grade bonds, equities, emerging market bonds, government bonds and hybrid bonds weighed on performance. Meanwhile, the exposure to non-traditional assets such as infrastructure added value. Equity market hedges also supported returns over the period since repurpose.

Persistently high inflation, hawkish shocks from central banks, a squeeze on disposable income in the hands of consumers and the impact of China's lockdown on supply chains and growth remain key risks for markets. The managers remain cautious and have reduced equity risk, particularly that centred on Europe, and have begun adding to high quality duration assets. More recently, they took the opportunity to selectively add back to risk where they believe asset classes have sold off significantly and are offering some asymmetric risk/return upside potential. Towards the end of the year under review, the managers reduced the allocation to European equities, and also added regional equity hedges in Europe, the UK and the US in view of the weak outlook for growth. The exposure to Japanese equities was increased, while the fund has a significant position in US equities. Elsewhere, the managers added to emerging market hard currency debt, which provides exposure to commodity exporting countries. They continue to favour Chinese government bonds and purchased a position in 30-year US Treasuries to add to the portfolio's defensiveness. The allocation to investment grade bonds was increased following a rise in yields; the managers also added to selected alternatives holdings. A small position in cash was also added to the portfolio.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 172 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities fell over the period. Tightening monetary policies amid elevated inflation, the Russia-Ukraine conflict and COVID-19 related challenges weighed on equities. Nonetheless, an ongoing global economic recovery and encouraging corporate earnings in developed markets provided support. Global bond markets posted negative returns. Government bond yields rose to multi-year highs and yield curves flattened on concerns over the impact of tighter monetary policies on growth prospects. Corporate bonds posted negative returns. Credit spreads widened as markets factored in the scaling back of central banks' policy support, pandemic-driven uncertainties, risks in the Chinese property sector and the impact of the war in Ukraine.

The fund delivered negative returns over the period, mainly due to its Beta component. In the Beta component, investment grade corporate bonds and government bonds weighed on performance as government bond yields rose and credit spreads widened. Global high yield bonds, emerging market debt and Japanese equities also hampered performance. Meanwhile, dividend paying equities and inflation-linked bonds supported returns. In the Alpha component, the allocation to alternatives, a selection of infrastructure, loans and real estate holdings, contributed to performance. However, certain discretionary trades within the thematic and opportunistic segment held back gains.

The fund is focused on delivering capital growth while targeting a specific volatility range. The fund gains broad market exposure via the Beta component, where asset allocation is determined systematically by a proprietary volatility management model on the basis of risk. Increased portfolio volatility in 2022 led to a shift in the Beta component's allocation, as the fund rotated from Growth to Defensive assets to reduce risk. In the Alpha component, the fund holds positions that are expected to add value independent of the broad market direction. For instance, the fund holds selected currency trades and precious metals based on the outlook and return potential of the underlying assets.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 74 MILLION

Manager's Overview

US dollar denominated Asian investment grade and Asian high yield bonds posted negative returns over the period as credit spreads widened. Emerging market debt also came under pressure amid heightened volatility, driven primarily by the US Federal Reserve's (Fed) pivot to a more aggressive stance and its decision to increase the federal funds rate. Russia's invasion of Ukraine in February, followed by various sanctions on Russia by the West, and the spread of the Omicron variant of COVID-19 dominated market sentiment over the period. This escalation of geopolitical risk led to a risk-off environment, which weighed on the performance of risk assets. Elsewhere, data from China signalled increasing downside risks to growth amid its strict zero-COVID-19 policy. Outside of China, key central banks in Asia held interest rates steady, while looking past rising inflationary pressures to support the ongoing economic recovery.

The fund posted negative returns over the period. Higher coupon income added value, while the credit component and term structure positioning weighed on performance. At a sector level, the overweight stance in the property, quasi-sovereign and industrial-other sectors were the primary detractors from returns. At an issuer level, the exposure to Redco Properties Group detracted the most from performance, while the allocation to Republic of Indonesia was the leading contributor to returns. The position in US dollar duration held back gains.

The managers remain cautious on a few risks in Asian credit markets such as the Russia-Ukraine conflict, tapering by the US Fed, rising inflation and a slowdown in China. They see some attractive valuations for emerging market credit despite fundamental challenges. The managers also see some room for US Treasury rates to rise, because of which they have kept the fund's duration position relatively short. In terms of currency exposure, the portfolio has a long position in the US dollar and reduced the local currency exposure. From a country perspective, the managers added some credit exposure to China and India.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 2,117 MILLION

Manager's Overview

US dollar denominated Asian investment grade bonds posted negative returns over the period as credit spreads widened. Russia's invasion of Ukraine in February, followed by various sanctions on Russia by the West, and the spread of the Omicron variant of COVID-19 dominated market sentiment over the period. US Treasury yields rose as the US Federal Reserve (Fed) turned hawkish in a bid to rein in soaring inflation. Elsewhere, data from China signalled increasing downside risks to growth amid its strict zero-COVID-19 policy. Outside of China, key central banks in Asia held interest rates steady, while looking past rising inflationary pressures in order to support the ongoing economic recovery.

The fund posted negative returns and underperformed the comparative index over the period. Higher coupon income and term structure positioning added value, while the credit component weighed on returns. At a sector level, the overweight stance in the property, consumer cyclicals and energy sectors were the primary detractors from performance. At an issuer level, the exposure to Sunac China Holdings detracted the most from returns, while the allocation to Huarong Finance was the leading contributor to performance. The position in US dollar duration also enhanced gains.

In the near term, the managers maintain a cautious view on Asian investment grade bonds given a few key risks on the horizon for the asset class. These include the slowdown in China, the Russia-Ukraine conflict, tapering by the US Fed and rising inflation. The managers see room for US Treasury yields to rise as the US Fed turns hawkish and spreads widen. Over the short term, they maintain a neutral to short bias towards US dollar duration and remain prudent on their credit risk exposure. From a country perspective, the managers have a more positive view towards China. Outside of China, the managers remain broadly neutral on credit beta exposure in the near term, given the numerous complex and unintended negatives from the Russia-Ukraine conflict.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 3,101 MILLION

Manager's Overview

US dollar denominated Asian high yield bonds posted negative returns over the period as credit spreads widened. The sell-off in the Chinese property sector intensified as investors focused on unexpected defaults and upcoming bond maturities. However, newsflow around policies to ease the liquidity crunch for developers and stimulate housing demand buoyed sentiment. On the economic front, data from China signalled increasing downside risks to growth amid its strict zero-COVID-19 policy. Outside of China, key central banks in Asia held interest rates steady, while looking past rising inflationary pressures in a bid to support the ongoing economic recovery. Elsewhere, US Treasury yields rose as the US Federal Reserve turned hawkish in a bid to rein in soaring inflation.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the period. Higher coupon income and term structure positioning supported returns. However, the credit component weighed on performance. At a sector level, the overweight stance in property, in particular the exposure to Yango Justice International, detracted the most from performance. From a ratings perspective, the exposure to CCC and below and unrated bonds held back gains. Conversely, the underweight stance in industrials contributed to relative returns. The position in US dollar duration supported performance.

The managers expect elevated defaults and volatility, along with attempts of liability management activities for Chinese property developers to build up a longer liquidity runway for the rest of 2022. Spreads in the Asian high yield universe are at levels that were rarely reached since the global financial crisis of 2007–2008, leaving room for potential spread compression. For Chinese property, the managers do not believe that authorities are trying to erase this key segment of the economy. Income remains a key driver of performance and bottom-up credit selection remains vital with a focus on liquid, high quality names. Further, the managers maintained a high cash and cash equivalent position, which reflects their focus on liquidity management.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 41 MILLION

Manager's Overview

China government bond yields fell over the review period as the People's Bank of China (PBOC) shifted to a policy easing stance. China's first quarter GDP grew faster-than-expected at 4.8%, although leading economic data pointed towards increasing downside risks to growth amid the government's zero-COVID-19 policy. The country's manufacturing and non-manufacturing Purchasing Managers' Indexes fell into contractionary territory over the period.

Since inception on 11 January 2022, the fund posted negative returns that were broadly in line with the comparative index. The fund invests in a diversified portfolio of bonds issued by the Chinese government and policy banks. The managers follow a systematic investment process that aims to deliver performance in line with the comparative index after fees, with active interest rate risk management and asset allocation used to diversify the sources of return.

Our internal signals suggest that yields on the 10-year China government bond are likely to fall in the short term. Investor sentiment is weakening as the outlook for China's GDP growth becomes more uncertain due to deteriorating expectations for global demand, rising geopolitical risk and slowing domestic business activity amid rising COVID-19 cases. China's 5.5% annual GDP growth target looks hard to achieve in light of the Omicron wave and the strict lockdown measures impacting Shenzhen, Jilin and Shanghai.

At a sector level, the exposure to the property sector, particularly holdings in Yango Justice International and Sunac China Holdings held back gains. Conversely, the allocation to banks and brokers supported returns. From a rating perspective, the exposure to CCC and below and not rated bonds weighed the most on performance.

The managers expect elevated defaults and volatility, along with attempts of liability management activities for Chinese property developers to build up a longer liquidity runway for the rest of 2022. Spreads in the China high yield universe are at levels that were rarely reached since the global financial crisis of 2007–2008, leaving room for potential spread compression. For Chinese property, the managers do not believe that authorities are trying to erase this key segment of the economy. Income remains a key driver of performance and bottom-up credit selection remains vital with a focus on liquid, high quality names. Further, the managers maintained a high cash and cash equivalent position, which reflects their focus on liquidity management.

Manager's Overview

Offshore renminbi investment grade bonds (Dim Sum) generated positive returns, supported by high coupon income. US Treasury yields rose as the US Federal Reserve turned hawkish in a bid to rein in soaring inflation, while Chinese onshore yields fell as the People's Bank of China (PBOC) shifted to a policy easing stance. US dollar denominated Chinese bonds posted negative returns due to rising interest rates. Sentiment around the Chinese property sector remained weak amid a selloff as investors focused on unexpected defaults and upcoming bond maturities for weaker developers. On the economic front, data from China pointed to increasing downside risks to growth amid its strict zero-COVID-19 policy. The country's manufacturing and non-manufacturing Purchasing Managers' Indexes fell into contractionary territory towards the end of the period.

The fund generated negative returns over the period. The credit component and overall term structure positioning, particularly for US dollar denominated bonds, weighed on performance. Conversely, high coupon income supported returns. At a sector level, the allocation to property held back gains, while quasi-sovereigns and banks and brokers supported returns. From a ratings perspective, the allocation to BB and below and not rated bonds hampered performance, while holdings in BBB rated bonds proved the most rewarding.

While 2022 started on a volatile note, the Chinese onshore fixed income market has been an exception in terms of its overall stability. 2022 will likely be a balance between these two market conditions: renminbi denominated markets, whether onshore or offshore, should provide stable carry to anchor returns, while the US dollar denominated fixed income universe is expected to provide trading opportunities given heightened volatility. The key catalysts could be the opening up of international travel, COVID-19 drug development and the trajectory of the US-China relationship. Onshore defaults and the tough situation of many property developers, along with the Omicron variant of COVID-19, are key uncertainties.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 162 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Emerging market bonds posted negative returns over the period. 2021 was an eventful and volatile year. Inflation fears, the continued spread of COVID-19 and questions about the US Federal Reserve's (Fed) tapering schedule were among the dominant factors creating uncertainty. Events such as defaults in the Chinese real estate sector and rising commodity prices added to investors' concerns. Coming into 2022, emerging market debt came under pressure amid heightened volatility, driven primarily by the US Fed's pivot to a more aggressive stance and its decision to increase the federal funds rate and begin quantitative tightening. Russia's invasion of Ukraine, which was followed by various sanctions on Russia by the West, led to a risk-off environment, which weighed on the performance of most risk assets. This, combined with higher yields hampered performance.

The fund underperformed the comparative index as credit positioning detracted from returns, while yields enhanced gains. The exposure to selected names in the China property sector hampered performance. The pressure seen in China's property markets from liquidity problems was exacerbated by lockdowns due to China's strict zero COVID-19 policy. Overweight positions in Huarong Finance in China and in Thaioil supported returns. The fund's US dollar duration added value.

The managers have an overweight stance in emerging market credit, but are ready to de-risk the portfolio. They are increasingly cautious about markets at this juncture for several reasons. Firstly, the war in Ukraine continues, with possibilities for further escalation. This has ongoing implications for emerging market debt, most notably higher oil and food prices, which are a cause for concern for many of these countries. The other key risks on the horizon are the US Fed's hawkish stance and immediate lockdowns in China. US dollar denominated debt returns have already come under pressure from a rise in US yields, which could continue to weigh on sentiment in the near term.

Emerging market bonds posted negative returns over the period. 2021 was an eventful and volatile year. Inflation fears, the continued spread of COVID-19 and questions about the US Federal Reserve's (Fed) tapering schedule were among the dominant factors creating uncertainty. Russia's invasion of Ukraine, which was followed by various sanctions on Russia by the West, led to a risk-off environment, which weighed on the performance of most risk assets. This, combined with higher yields hampered performance.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the period. While yields added value, the fund's term structure and credit positioning weighed on returns. On the credit side, overweights in Ukraine, Belarus and Chinese high yield property names accounted for the bulk of the underperformance. Meanwhile, an underweight position in Russia's sovereign bonds supported relative returns. The exposure to Huarong Finance in China and an overweight position in Zambia's sovereign bonds enhanced gains. However, a conviction position in local currency Russian bonds hampered performance.

The managers have an overweight stance in emerging market credit, but are ready to de-risk the portfolio. They are increasingly cautious about markets at this juncture for several reasons. Firstly, the war in Ukraine continues, with possibilities for further escalation. This has ongoing implications for emerging market debt, most notably higher oil and food prices, which are a cause for concern for many of these countries. The other key risks on the horizon are the US Fed's hawkish stance and immediate lockdowns in China. US dollar denominated debt returns have already come under pressure from a rise in US yields, which could continue to weigh on sentiment in the near term.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 243 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Emerging market bonds posted negative returns over the period. 2021 was an eventful and volatile year. Inflation fears, the continued spread of COVID-19 and questions about the US Federal Reserve's (Fed) tapering schedule were among the dominant factors creating uncertainty. Events such as defaults in the Chinese real estate sector and rising commodity prices added to investors' concerns. Coming into 2022, emerging market debt came under pressure amid heightened volatility, driven primarily by the US Fed's pivot to a more aggressive stance and its decision to increase the federal funds rate and begin quantitative tightening. Russia's invasion of Ukraine, which was followed by various sanctions on Russia by the West, led to a risk-off environment, which weighed on the performance of most risk assets. This, combined with higher yields hampered performance.

The fund outperformed the comparative index over the year, supported by its yield and currency positioning, as well as its duration position. Within the fund's currency strategy, the positioning in the Russian ruble added value. In the frontier space, the holding in Egypt generated some positive returns, but a small position in Ghana detracted from performance. On the duration front, underweight positions in Hungary and Poland enhanced gains, while overweights in Brazil and Thailand weighed on returns given the widespread rise in local currency bond yields.

The managers are increasingly cautious about markets in the near term, given concerns around a slowdown in growth, a hawkish Fed, ongoing inflationary pressures and the macroeconomic shock from Russia's invasion of Ukraine. The fund is currently underweight emerging market currency beta and has an overweight duration position relative to the index. The managers are underweight currency risk, which is usually the asset class that is the most sensitive to emerging market growth momentum. Within the fund's duration strategy, the overweight is concentrated in countries that are at mature stages of their hiking cycles to temper inflationary pressures.

Manager's Overview

Emerging market bonds posted negative returns over the period. 2021 was an eventful and volatile year. Inflation fears, the continued spread of COVID-19 and questions about the US Federal Reserve's (Fed) tapering schedule were among the dominant factors creating uncertainty. Events such as defaults in the Chinese real estate sector and rising commodity prices added to investors' concerns. Coming into 2022, emerging market debt came under pressure amid heightened volatility, driven primarily by the US Fed's pivot to a more aggressive stance and its decision to increase the federal funds rate and begin quantitative tightening. Russia's invasion of Ukraine, which was followed by various sanctions on Russia by the West, led to a risk-off environment, which weighed on the performance of most risk assets. This, combined with higher yields hampered performance.

The fund posted negative total returns over the period, largely due to its credit and term structure positioning, while yield supported returns. Within the credit bucket, selected positions in Russia and China were the key detractors from performance. Positions in Ukraine and Belarus also weighed on returns given the very sharp sell-off in these countries following Russia's invasion of Ukraine. The exposure to Huarong Finance in China and to Zambia's sovereign bonds added value. A short position in Hungarian local duration buoyed performance, while a long position in Thai local duration held back gains. The fund's US dollar duration position also weighed on returns.

The managers are increasingly cautious about markets in the near term, given concerns around a slowdown in growth, a hawkish Fed, ongoing inflationary pressures, the macroeconomic shock from Russia's invasion of Ukraine and immediate lockdowns in China. They are running low levels of currency risk, which is usually the asset class that is the most sensitive to emerging market growth momentum. The managers are selectively positioned in local currency duration after many emerging market central banks raised their policy rates last year.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : EUR 1,160 MILLION

Manager's Overview

European bonds posted negative returns as credit spreads widened over the period. Persistent inflation dynamics led to increased monetary policy concerns. Global central banks looked set to embark on a much more aggressive tightening cycle as inflation touched fresh multi-decade highs in the US, UK and eurozone, driven by a surge in food and energy prices. As a result, sovereign yields, including US Treasury yields, German bund yields and UK government bond (Gilts) yields rose to multi-year highs and yield curves flattened across the globe. Corporate bonds remained remarkably resilient for most of the period amid an improvement in the growth outlook, rising COVID-19 vaccinations and strong corporate earnings. However, gains were offset by supply chain constraints, the emergence of the Omicron variant of COVID-19, Russia's invasion of Ukraine, and worries around the potential impact of monetary policy tightening.

The fund posted negative returns but outperformed the index over the period. Favourable credit selection supported relative performance, while overall term structure positioning held back gains. The underweight allocation to quasi-sovereigns and banks and consumer sectors were the primary contributors to returns. At an issuer level, holdings in Berkshire Hathaway and Thermofisher Scientific enhanced gains. The interest rate risk exposure detracted from performance as sovereign bond yields rose significantly over the period.

For the majority of 2021, the fund had a very defensive position in credit due to expensive valuations and uncertainty about the European Central Bank's (ECB) quantitative easing cycle. From the start of March 2022, when spreads widened materially due to Russia's invasion of Ukraine, the fund started to increase its exposure to credit risk. The fund still has ample liquidity to deal with flows or to continue to add risk if valuations are attractive. However, the managers have been very selective in how they add risk, and have broadly invested in highly rated companies.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : EUR 608 MILLION

Manager's Overview

European bonds posted negative returns as credit spreads widened over the period. Persistent inflation dynamics led to increased monetary policy concerns. Global central banks looked set to embark on a much more aggressive tightening cycle as inflation touched fresh multi-decade highs in the US, UK and eurozone, driven by a surge in food and energy prices. As a result, sovereign yields, including US Treasury yields, German bund yields and UK government bond (Gilts) yields rose to multi-year highs and yield curves flattened across the globe. Corporate bonds remained remarkably resilient for most of the period amid an improvement in the growth outlook, rising COVID-19 vaccinations and strong corporate earnings. However, gains were offset by supply chain constraints, the emergence of the Omicron variant of COVID-19, Russia's invasion of Ukraine, and worries around the potential impact of monetary policy tightening.

The fund posted negative returns and underperformed the index over the period. Favourable credit selection supported relative performance while overall term structure positioning held back gains. The underweight allocation to quasi-sovereigns and banks and consumer sectors were the primary contributors to performance. At an issuer level, the underweight position in Gazprom and Bayer AG enhanced gains. The interest rate risk exposure detracted from performance as sovereign bond yields rose significantly over the period.

For the majority of 2021, the fund had a very defensive position in credit due to expensive valuations and uncertainty about the European Central Bank's (ECB) quantitative easing cycle. From the start of March 2022, when spreads widened materially due to Russia's invasion of Ukraine, the fund started to increase its exposure to credit risk. The fund still has ample liquidity to deal with flows or to continue to add risk if valuations are attractive. However, the managers have been very selective in how they add risk, and have broadly invested in highly rated companies.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : EUR 2,448 MILLION

Manager's Overview

European high yield bonds posted negative returns as credit spreads widened, driven by Russia's invasion of Ukraine, the emergence of the Omicron variant of COVID-19, rising volatility in China's property sector and supply chain constraints. However, some losses were offset by an improvement in the growth outlook, rising COVID-19 vaccinations and strong corporate earnings. Elsewhere, global central banks looked set to embark on a much more aggressive tightening cycle as inflation touched fresh multi-decade highs in the US, UK and eurozone, driven by a surge in food and energy prices. As a result, sovereign yields, including US Treasury yields, German bund yields and UK government bond (Gilts) yields rose to multi-year highs and yield curves flattened across the globe.

The fund posted negative returns but outperformed the index over the period, supported by favourable credit selection and higher coupon income. At a sector level, the underweight position in government related and basic industry credits added relative value, while the bias against banks & brokers weighed on relative returns. From an issuer perspective, the underweight stance in Credit Bank of Moscow and Evraz Group enhanced relative gains. Conversely, the exposure to Ozon and Metinvest detracted from returns. From a rating perspective, the underweight stance in BB rated credits added the most value.

As the macroeconomic environment continues to deteriorate on stagflationary concerns and additional sanctions on Russia, the managers expect continuous pressure on spreads. However, high yield spreads already discount some negative scenarios. As such, the managers do not believe that a significant derisking is prudent at this time, but will continue to monitor single name, sector and country risks to see whether derisking makes sense. The managers maintain a negative view on the asset class due to a volatile geopolitical landscape, pressure on company earnings and global central banks' hiking cycle.

Manager's Overview

Global bond markets saw increased monetary policy concerns amid persistent inflation dynamics over the period. Global central banks embarked on a tightening cycle as inflation touched fresh multi-decade highs in the US, UK and eurozone, driven by a surge in food and energy prices. As a result, sovereign yields, including US Treasury yields, German bund yields and UK government bond (Gilts) yields rose to multi-year highs. Meanwhile, corporate bonds remained remarkably resilient for most of the period amid an improvement in the growth outlook, rising COVID-19 vaccinations and strong corporate earnings. However, gains were offset by rising volatility related to China's property sector, supply chain constraints, the emergence of the Omicron variant of COVID-19, Russia's invasion of Ukraine, and worries around the potential impact of monetary policy tightening.

The fund posted negative returns over the period. Credit exposure detracted from returns amid a broad-based widening of credit spreads. The exposure to the property, quasi-sovereign and technology & communication sectors were the primary detractors from performance. At an issuer level, holdings in Sunac China Holdings, Yango Group and Red Sun Properties Group held back gains. The interest rate risk exposure also detracted from performance as sovereign bond yields rose significantly over the period. However, these losses were partially offset by the euro and sterling duration positions at the front end of the yield curve.

The managers reduced the fund's credit risk, especially via investment grade bonds, and added developed market sovereign bonds and high yield bonds. They also added back duration following the recent selloff in rates. Investors' risk appetite remains relatively low given the more aggressive stance of global central banks and their potential hit to growth, coupled with the downside risks to growth in China from COVID-19 lockdowns and in the eurozone from the Ukraine war. Against this backdrop, the managers remain cautious and continue to focus on security selection and alpha opportunities.

Manager's Overview

Global bond markets saw increased monetary policy concerns amid persistent inflation dynamics over the period. Global central banks embarked on a tightening cycle as inflation touched fresh multi-decade highs in the US, UK and eurozone, driven by a surge in food and energy prices. As a result, sovereign yields, including US Treasury yields, German bund yields and UK government bond (Gilts) yields rose to multi-year highs. Credit spreads widened over the period, driven by Russia's invasion of Ukraine, the emergence of the Omicron variant of COVID-19, rising volatility in China's property sector and supply chain constraints. However, some of these losses were offset by an improvement in the growth outlook, rising COVID-19 vaccinations and strong corporate earnings.

The fund posted negative returns and underperformed the index over the period. Term structure positioning held back gains, while credit selection supported relative performance. The underweight allocation to quasi-sovereigns and utility credits contributed to returns, while the exposure to technology & communication credits weighed on performance. At an issuer level, holdings in Energy Transfer and Ashland enhanced gains. The interest rate risk exposure detracted from returns as sovereign bond yields rose significantly over the period.

The managers expect volatility to remain elevated and there is still no convincing case for owning spreads at this point, even as technicals in the market are quite visible in certain areas. Central banks will continue to increase interest rates in the short term, but it will not be long before the market pulls back from what is priced in for future rate hikes despite the longer lasting effects of the Russia-Ukraine war anchoring elevated inflation expectations. The focus will soon shift to stagflation as growth eventually plummets, thus challenging central banks, corporates and households. The combination of various factors at play at the moment, and expectations for persistent volatility, warrants a selective approach and a careful eye on portfolio liquidity to ensure that the managers have the flexibility to act.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 256 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global bond markets saw increased monetary policy concerns amid persistent inflation dynamics over the period. Global central banks looked set to embark on a much more aggressive tightening cycle as inflation touched fresh multi-decade highs in the US, UK and eurozone, driven by a surge in food and energy prices. As a result, sovereign yields, including US Treasury yields, German bund yields and UK government bond (Gilts) yields rose to multi-year highs and yield curves flattened across the globe. However, gains were offset by rising volatility related to China's property sector, supply chain constraints, the emergence of the Omicron variant of COVID-19, Russia's invasion of Ukraine, and worries around the potential impact of monetary policy tightening.

The fund posted negative returns and underperformed the index over the period. Credit positioning and term structure positioning detracted from returns amid a broad-based widening of credit spreads and tighter monetary policy risks. The exposure to the consumer non-cyclical, basic industry and other financial sectors were the primary detractors from performance. At an issuer level, overweight holdings in PhosAgro and Adler Group, and the underweight position in Apple held back gains. The interest rate risk exposure also detracted from performance as sovereign bond yields rose significantly over the period. Within ratings, BBB and below rated credits detracted the most from returns.

In the credit rating segments, the managers remain overweight in BBB and BB bonds due to their attractive yield levels, supported by monetary and fiscal stimulus measures, and continue to benefit from attractive carry opportunities. The risk appetite remains relatively low given the more aggressive stance of global central banks and their potential hit to growth, coupled with the downside risks to growth in China from COVID-19 lockdowns and in the eurozone from the Ukraine war. Against this backdrop, the managers remain cautious and continue to focus on security selection and alpha opportunities.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 225 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global high yield markets posted negative returns as spreads widened over the period. 2021 will be remembered as another unprecedented year for global financial markets. In the wake of the COVID-19 pandemic, investors were catapulted into a new and uncharted world of record-high asset prices, diminishing policy support, secular structural changes and unforeseen macroeconomic surprises. An energy crisis in Europe and the emergence of a new COVID-19 variant added the final touches to what will go down as another very memorable year for financial investors. Coming into 2022, investor sentiment nosedived again amid heightened volatility, driven primarily by the US Federal Reserve's hawkish policy pivot to increase the federal funds rate and begin quantitative tightening sooner and/or faster than initially anticipated. Growing geopolitical tensions between Russia and Ukraine further intensified the risk sentiment.

The fund posted negative returns but outperformed the index over the period. Higher coupon income and favourable credit selection contributed to returns. At a sector level, the underweight allocation to government related and communication credits added value, while the exposure to banks & brokers and property credits weighed on returns. From an issuer perspective, the underweight stance in Credit Bank of Moscow and China Evergrande Group contributed the most to returns. Conversely, the exposure to China Aoyuan Group and Easy Tactic detracted from performance.

As the macroeconomic environment continues to deteriorate on stagflationary concerns, additional sanctions on Russia, and tightening real rates, the managers expect continuous pressure on spreads. As such, the managers do not believe that a significant derisking is prudent at this time, but will continue to monitor single name, sector and country risks to see whether derisking makes sense. The managers maintain a neutral stance on the asset class. Coupon income is likely to continue to support the total return picture for medium to long-term investors, alongside attractive valuations in parts of the universe such as in the Asia high yield space.

Manager's Overview

Global high yield markets posted negative returns as spreads widened over the period. 2021 will be remembered as another unprecedented year for global financial markets. In the wake of the COVID-19 pandemic, investors were catapulted into a new and uncharted world of record-high asset prices, diminishing policy support, secular structural changes and unforeseen macroeconomic surprises. An energy crisis in Europe and the emergence of a new COVID-19 variant added the final touches to what will go down as another very memorable year for financial investors. Coming into 2022, investor sentiment nosedived again amid heightened volatility, driven primarily by the US Federal Reserve's hawkish policy pivot to increase the federal funds rate and begin quantitative tightening sooner and/or faster than initially anticipated. Growing geopolitical tensions between Russia and Ukraine further intensified the risk sentiment.

The fund posted negative returns and underperformed the index over the period. Higher coupon income contributed to returns while term structure positioning held back gains. At a sector level, the underweight allocation to insurance and quasi-sovereigns credits added value, while the exposure to banks & brokers and consumer credit weighed on returns. From an issuer perspective, the underweight stance in Credit Bank of Moscow and Alfa Bank enhanced gains. On the contrary, positions in Electricite De France and Banco Santander detracted from returns.

As the macroeconomic environment continues to deteriorate on stagflationary concerns, additional sanctions on Russia, and tightening real rates, the managers expect continuous pressure on spreads. As such, the managers do not believe that a significant derisking is prudent at this time, but will continue to monitor single name, sector and country risks to see whether derisking makes sense. The managers maintain a neutral stance on the asset class. Coupon income is likely to continue to support the total return picture for medium to long-term investors, alongside attractive valuations in parts of the universe such as in the Asia high yield space.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 361 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global bond markets saw increased monetary policy concerns amid persistent inflation dynamics over the period. Global central banks looked set to embark on a much more aggressive tightening cycle as inflation touched fresh multi-decade highs in the US, UK and eurozone, driven by a surge in food and energy prices. As a result, sovereign yields, including US Treasury yields, German bund yields and UK government bond (Gilts) yields rose to multi-year highs and yield curves flattened across the globe. Corporate bonds remained remarkably resilient for most of the period amid an improvement in the growth outlook, rising COVID-19 vaccinations and strong corporate earnings. However, gains were offset by rising volatility related to China's property sector, supply chain constraints, the emergence of the Omicron variant of COVID-19, Russia's invasion of Ukraine, and worries around the potential impact of monetary policy tightening.

The fund posted negative returns over the period. Credit exposure detracted from returns amid a broad-based widening of credit spreads. The exposure to the property, banks and consumer sectors were the primary detractors from performance. At an issuer level, holdings in Sunac China Holdings, Sovcombank, and Yango Justice International held back gains. The interest rate risk exposure also detracted from performance as sovereign bond yields rose significantly over the period. However, these losses were partially offset by the US dollar and euro duration positions at the front end of the yield curve.

The managers reduced the fund's duration exposure over the period, but retained a skew towards the US as the risk appetite remains relatively low given heightened geopolitical risks amid the ongoing conflict in Ukraine. Furthermore, persistently high inflation, the more aggressive stance of global central banks, growth challenges from the 'consumer squeeze', tighter financial conditions and the impact of China's lockdown on supply chains and growth remain sources of risk. Against this backdrop, the managers remain defensively positioned and continue to focus on security selection and alpha opportunities.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 2,620 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Fixed income markets posted negative returns over the period, amid increasing monetary policy concerns and persistent inflation dynamics. Inflation touched fresh multi-decade highs in the US, UK and eurozone, driven by a surge in food and energy prices. Sovereign yields, including US Treasury yields, German bund yields, and UK government bond (Gilts) yields rose to multi-year highs as investors were increasingly concerned about the impact of tighter monetary policies on global growth prospects. The US Federal Reserve (Fed) raised interest rates by 0.25 percentage points, while the Bank of England (BoE) delivered three interest rate hikes over the period, taking its key bank rate to 0.75%. The European Central Bank (ECB) also turned incrementally hawkish and confirmed its plan to end bond buying in the third quarter.

The fund generated negative returns but outperformed the comparative index over the period. Global breakevens widened and the fund had a tactical positioning on breakevens during the year. More recently, the fund has long US and UK breakeven positions. The managers continue to see value in breakevens, but this is beginning to wane, while real yields are starting to look attractively valued at current yield levels. Encouragingly, the fund's lower duration approach relative to full-maturity inflation-linked indices helped to offset losses from the rise in yields.

The managers have a long position in US breakevens and real yields in the US are starting to look attractive. The fund has a long UK breakeven position as energy prices are likely to drive inflation in the region higher. In terms of euro real duration, the managers moved to a long position as they see downside risks to European real growth. They expect a significant divergence in growth between Europe and the US, as Europe is much more impacted by the energy crisis sparked by the war in Ukraine. The potential for a European Union embargo on Russian energy would have significant downside implications for the European economy.

Manager's Overview

Global bond markets saw increased monetary policy concerns amid persistent inflation dynamics over the period. Global central banks looked set to embark on a much more aggressive tightening cycle as inflation touched fresh multi-decade highs in the US, UK and eurozone, driven by a surge in food and energy prices. As a result, sovereign yields, including US Treasury yields, German bund yields and UK government bond (Gilts) yields rose to multi-year highs and yield curves flattened across the globe. Corporate bonds remained remarkably resilient for most of the period amid an improvement in the growth outlook, rising COVID-19 vaccinations and strong corporate earnings. However, gains were offset by rising volatility related to China's property sector, supply chain constraints, the emergence of the Omicron variant of COVID-19, Russia's invasion of Ukraine, and worries around the potential impact of monetary policy tightening.

The fund posted negative returns over the period. Credit exposure detracted from returns amid a broad-based widening of credit spreads. The exposure to the property, banks and consumer sectors were the primary detractors from performance. At an issuer level, holdings in Yuzhou Properties, Yango Justice International and Sunac China Holdings held back gains. The interest rate risk exposure also detracted from performance as sovereign bond yields rose significantly over the period. However, these losses were partially offset by the US dollar duration position at the front end of the yield curve.

The managers reduced the fund's duration exposure over the period, but retained a skew towards the US as the risk appetite remains relatively low given heightened geopolitical risks amid the ongoing conflict in Ukraine. Furthermore, persistently high inflation, the more aggressive stance of global central banks, growth challenges from the 'consumer squeeze', tighter financial conditions and the impact of China's lockdown on supply chains and growth remain sources of risk. Against this backdrop, the managers remain defensively positioned and continue to focus on security selection and alpha opportunities.

Manager's Overview

US dollar denominated Asian investment grade and high yield bonds posted negative returns over the period as credit spreads widened. Russia's invasion of Ukraine in February, followed by various sanctions on Russia by the West, and the spread of the Omicron variant of COVID-19 dominated market sentiment. US Treasury yields rose as the US Federal Reserve (Fed) turned hawkish in a bid to rein in soaring inflation. Elsewhere, data from China signalled increasing downside risks to growth amid its strict zero-COVID-19 policy. Outside of China, key central banks in Asia held interest rates steady, while looking past rising inflationary pressures to support the ongoing economic recovery.

The fund posted negative returns and underperformed the comparative index over the period. Higher coupon income and term structure positioning added value, while the credit component weighed on returns. At a sector level, the overweight stance in the technology & communications, property, and banks & brokers sectors were the primary detractors from performance. At an issuer level, the exposure to Logan Property Holdings detracted the most from returns, while the allocation to Sunac China Holdings was the leading contributor to performance. The position in US dollar duration also enhanced gains.

In the near term, the managers maintain a neutral to short bias towards US dollar duration and stay prudent on credit risk exposure. They favour high-quality issuers with better environmental, social, and governance (ESG) characteristics, including lower carbon emitters. By emission attribution exposure, the fund has 90% less greenhouse gas exposure at an issuer level relative to the benchmark. From a market perspective, the managers remain cautious on a few key risks on the horizon for the asset class, such as the slowdown in China, the Russia-Ukraine conflict, tapering by the US Fed and rising inflation. They see some room for US Treasury yields to rise as the US Fed turns hawkish and spreads widen.

Manager's Overview

Global bond markets saw increased monetary policy concerns amid persistent inflation dynamics over the period. Global central banks embarked on a tightening cycle as inflation touched fresh multi-decade highs in the US, UK and eurozone, driven by a surge in food and energy prices. As a result, sovereign yields, including US Treasury yields, German bund yields and UK government bond (Gilts) yields rose to multi-year highs. Credit spreads widened over the period, driven by Russia's invasion of Ukraine, the emergence of the Omicron variant of COVID-19, rising volatility in China's property sector and supply chain constraints. However, some of these losses were offset by an improvement in the growth outlook, rising COVID-19 vaccinations and strong corporate earnings.

The fund posted negative returns and underperformed the index over the period. Term structure positioning and unfavourable credit selection held back relative gains, while higher coupon income supported performance. The underweight allocation to banks & brokers and consumer non-cyclicals credits weighed on performance, while the underweight stance in energy credits contributed to returns. At an issuer level, holdings in Adler Group and the underweight positions in AT&T and Sky plc held back gains.

The managers expect volatility to remain elevated and there is still no convincing case for owning spreads at this point, even as technicals in the market are quite visible in certain areas. Central banks will continue to increase interest rates in the short term, but it will not be long before the market pulls back from what is priced in for future rate hikes despite the longer lasting effects of the Russia-Ukraine war anchoring elevated inflation expectations. The focus will soon shift to stagflation as growth eventually plummets, thus challenging central banks, corporates and households. The combination of various factors at play at the moment, and expectations for persistent volatility, warrants a selective approach and a careful eye on portfolio liquidity to ensure that the managers have the flexibility to act.

Global bond markets saw increased monetary policy concerns amid persistent inflation dynamics over the period. Global central banks embarked on a tightening cycle as inflation touched fresh multi-decade highs in the US, UK and eurozone, driven by a surge in food and energy prices. As a result, sovereign yields, including US Treasury yields, German bund yields and UK government bond (Gilts) yields rose to multi-year highs. However, gains were offset by rising volatility related to China's property sector, supply chain constraints, the emergence of the Omicron variant of COVID-19, Russia's invasion of Ukraine, and worries around the potential impact of monetary policy tightening.

The fund posted negative returns over the period. Credit exposure detracted from returns amid a broad-based widening of credit spreads. The allocation to the quasi-sovereign, property and technology & communication sectors were the primary detractors from performance. At an issuer level, holdings in Shimao Group Holdings, Polyus and Vonovia held back gains. The interest rate risk exposure also detracted from performance as sovereign bond yields rose significantly over the period. However, these losses were partially offset by the US dollar, euro and sterling duration positions at the front end of the yield curve.

The managers reduced the fund's credit risk, especially via investment grade bonds and emerging market debt, and added to its cash position. They also added back duration following the recent selloff in rates. Investors' risk appetite remains relatively low given the more aggressive stance of global central banks and their potential hit to growth, coupled with the downside risks to growth in China from COVID-19 lockdowns and in the eurozone from the Ukraine war. Against this backdrop, the managers remain cautious and continue to focus on security selection and alpha opportunities.

Manager's Overview

Global bond markets saw increased monetary policy concerns amid persistent inflation dynamics over the period. Global central banks embarked on a tightening cycle as inflation touched fresh multi-decade highs in the US, UK and eurozone, driven by a surge in food and energy prices. As a result, sovereign yields, including US Treasury yields, German bund yields and UK government bond (Gilts) yields rose to multi-year highs. Credit spreads widened over the period, driven by Russia's invasion of Ukraine, the emergence of the Omicron variant of COVID-19, rising volatility in China's property sector and supply chain constraints. However, some of these losses were offset by an improvement in the growth outlook, rising COVID-19 vaccinations and strong corporate earnings.

The fund posted negative returns but outperformed the index over the period. Term structure positioning and credit selection contributed to performance. The overweight allocation to quasi-sovereigns and the underweight position in energy credits added value, while the exposure to technology & communication credits weighed on performance. At an issuer level, holdings in Energy Transfer and Ashland enhanced gains.

The managers expect volatility to remain elevated and there is still no convincing case for owning spreads at this point, even as technicals in the market are quite visible in certain areas. Central banks will continue to increase interest rates in the short term, but it will not be long before the market pulls back from what is priced in for future rate hikes despite the longer lasting effects of the Russia-Ukraine war anchoring elevated inflation expectations. The focus will soon shift to stagflation as growth eventually plummets, thus challenging central banks, corporates and households. The combination of various factors at play at the moment, and expectations for persistent volatility, warrants a selective approach and a careful eye on portfolio liquidity to ensure that the managers have the flexibility to act.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 3,278 MILLION

Manager's Overview

US high yield markets posted negative returns as spreads widened over the period. 2021 will be remembered as another unprecedented year for global financial markets. In the wake of the COVID-19 pandemic, investors were catapulted into a new and uncharted world of record-high asset prices, diminishing policy support, secular structural changes and unforeseen macroeconomic surprises. An energy crisis in Europe and the emergence of a new COVID-19 variant added the final touches to what will go down as another very memorable year for financial investors. Coming into 2022, investor sentiment nosedived again amid heightened volatility driven primarily by the US Federal Reserve's hawkish policy pivot to increase the federal funds rate and begin quantitative tightening sooner and/or faster than initially anticipated. Growing geopolitical tensions between Russia and Ukraine further intensified the risk sentiment.

The fund posted negative returns but outperformed the index over the period. Favourable credit selection strategy and term structure positioning contributed to returns. At a sector level, the underweight exposure to consumer non-cyclical and energy credits added value, while the underweight stance in consumer cyclical credits weighed on returns. From an issuer perspective, holdings in InterGen and Chesapeake Energy enhanced gains. On the contrary, the underweight stance in Transocean Sentry (drilling contractor) and American Airlines dragged gains.

The fund aims to maintain a relatively defensive credit exposure, with underweight positions in credit beta and spread duration versus the benchmark. The managers also maintain an underweight duration stance, acknowledging that duration is not really a big driver of alpha for the asset class and that interest rate volatility is likely to remain high. Despite value starting to emerge in the asset class, the managers remain cautious amid the deteriorating macroeconomic outlook. Sectors benefiting from the rise in commodity prices remain in favour. The managers are monitoring these areas carefully for a change in relative preferences.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : EUR 451 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global central banks looked set to embark on a much more aggressive tightening cycle amid persistent inflation. Consumer price inflation measures touched fresh highs, driven by a surge in food and energy prices. The European Central Bank (ECB) turned incrementally hawkish over the period. It announced that it will scale back its bond buying programme and confirmed its plan to end bond buying in the third quarter. Economic activity in the eurozone accelerated in April as the service industry benefited from the loosening of lockdown restrictions. The composite Purchasing Managers' Index (PMI) accelerated to 55.8 in April, the highest reading in seven months. The services PMI rose to 57.7, boosted by higher tourism and leisure activity, although the manufacturing PMI declined to 55.3 in light of ongoing supply chain problems and longer delivery times. The eurozone's inflation rose to 7.4% in March, driven by energy prices, which surged by 44% over the month. The outlook for service sector growth means that business optimism improved slightly over the month, although it remains considerably lower than at the start of the year.

The fund prioritised yield enhancement along with security of capital and a strong liquidity profile, while adhering to its strict credit quality guidelines. The managers hold a large portion of the portfolio in highly liquid securities, in accordance with the key aim of maintaining liquidity and capital preservation. At the end of the review period, the fund's weighted average maturity (WAM) stood at 42 days.

The portfolio strategy remains conservative. The focus on credit quality remains high, with exposure to issuers rated Aa3 or higher at 39%. The portfolio is also well diversified across regions. A high level of liquidity is maintained, with approximately 43% of net assets maturing in 7 days or less.

Manager's Overview

The Bank of England (BoE) surprised markets by raising its Bank Rate by 0.15 percentage points at its December meeting, given labour market tightness and inflationary pressures. The BoE continued with its policy normalisation and delivered two interest rate hikes of 0.25 percentage points each at its February and March meetings. Markets priced in further interest rate hikes by the central bank after the UK's Consumer Price Index (CPI) inflation rose to 7% in March – its sharpest annual rise in decades. Meanwhile, economic growth was strong in the first quarter of 2022, supported by the services sector as COVID-19 restrictions were mostly removed. However, rising inflation and uncertainties due to Russia's invasion of Ukraine weighed on activity towards the end of the period. In April, the Composite Purchasing Managers' Index (PMI) declined, and consumer sentiment fell to an over-decade low.

The fund prioritised security of capital and a strong liquidity profile along with yield enhancement, while adhering to its strict credit quality guidelines. The managers held a large portion of the portfolio in highly liquid securities, in accordance with the key aim of maintaining liquidity and capital preservation. The portfolio strategy remained conservative. The focus on credit quality was high, and the portfolio was well diversified across regions. The fund was closed on 10 May 2022.

Manager's Overview

Global central banks looked set to embark on a much more aggressive tightening cycle amid persistent inflation. Consumer price inflation measures touched fresh highs, driven by a surge in food and energy prices. As expected, the US Federal Reserve (Fed) commenced its hiking cycle with a 0.25 percentage point interest rate hike at its March meeting and indicated that it would take a more aggressive stance towards inflation. Fed Chairman Jerome Powell said that the central bank would consider raising interest rates by 0.50 percentage points at its meeting in May 2022. On the economic front, the unemployment level declined to 3.6% in March, with job openings remaining strong at 11.5 million. Inflation continued to surge, led by increasing prices of energy and food. The Personal Consumption Expenditures index (PCE) rose to 6.6% in the 12 months to March, while the Consumer Price Index (CPI) climbed to 8.5%. The S&P Global Flash US manufacturing Purchasing Managers' Index (PMI) came in at 59.7 in April, an expansion on the previous month's reading of 58.8. Manufacturers were able to increase production due to strong demand, but confidence in the manufacturing sector slipped to a six-month low.

The fund prioritised security of capital and a strong liquidity profile along with yield enhancement, while adhering to its strict credit quality guidelines. The managers hold a large portion of the portfolio in highly liquid securities in accordance with the key aim of maintaining liquidity and capital preservation. At the end of the review period, the fund's weighted average maturity (WAM) stood at 37 days.

The portfolio strategy remains conservative. The focus on credit quality remains high, with the exposure to issuers rated Aa3 or higher at 57%. The portfolio is also well diversified across regions. A high level of liquidity is maintained, with 58% of net assets maturing in 7 days or less.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 16 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Fixed income markets posted negative returns over the period, amid increasing monetary policy concerns and persistent inflation dynamics. Sovereign yields, including US Treasury yields, German bund yields and UK government bond (Gilts) yields rose to multi-year highs and yield curves flattened as investors were increasingly concerned about the impact of tighter monetary policies on global growth prospects. Meanwhile, corporate bonds posted negative returns as credit spreads widened and investment grade bonds faced additional headwinds of rising sovereign bond yields. Gains from an improvement in the growth outlook, rising COVID-19 vaccinations and strong corporate earnings were offset by increasing volatility related to China's property sector, supply chain constraints, the emergence of the Omicron variant of COVID-19 and Russia's invasion of Ukraine.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the year as expenses outweighed the contribution from cash instruments.

The fund follows a dynamic asset allocation model, which will consist of 100% cash at maturity. The monthly migration path towards the final portfolio is set to have an increasing exposure to bonds and cash, and a decreasing weight in equities over time until maturity. In line with this, the fund remains fully invested in cash and short-term instruments.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : EUR 258 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities fell in US dollar terms but were up in euro and sterling terms over the review period. Tightening monetary policies in view of elevated inflation and geopolitical tensions amid Russia's attack on Ukraine weighed on markets in the latter part of the period. The emergence of more infectious variants of COVID-19 as well as a resurgence in infections also held back gains earlier in the period. Nevertheless, stock prices were supported by the economic reopening and recovery themes, coupled with progress on the roll-out of COVID-19 vaccines globally. Fixed income markets posted negative returns over the period, amid increasing monetary policy concerns and persistent inflation dynamics. Sovereign yields, including US Treasury yields, German bund yields and UK government bond (Gilts) yields rose to multi-year highs and yield curves flattened as investors were increasingly concerned about the impact of tighter monetary policies on global growth prospects. Meanwhile, corporate bonds posted negative returns as credit spreads widened.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the year. Strategy selection in Europe and emerging market equities weighed on returns. In particular, the underlying European dynamic growth strategy detracted from performance due to its positioning in the information technology sector. The strategy that invests in Emerging Europe, Middle East and Africa weighed on returns in light of its positioning in the financials sector. Meanwhile, the exposure to the underlying Euro bond strategy added value on the back of favourable credit selection.

The fund follows a dynamic asset allocation model, which will consist of 100% cash at maturity. The monthly migration path towards the final portfolio is set to have an increasing exposure to bonds and cash, and a decreasing weight in equities over time until maturity. Over the period, the allocation to Europe, Japan and emerging market equities was reduced, while the holding in Asia Pacific ex Japan equities was re-established. Elsewhere, the exposure to cash and bonds was increased.

Manager's Overview

Global equities fell in US dollar terms but were up in euro and sterling terms over the review period. Tightening monetary policies in view of elevated inflation and geopolitical tensions amid Russia's attack on Ukraine weighed on markets in the latter part of the period. The emergence of more infectious variants of COVID-19 as well as a resurgence in infections also held back gains earlier in the period. Nevertheless, stock prices were supported by the economic reopening and recovery themes, coupled with progress on the roll-out of COVID-19 vaccines globally. Fixed income markets posted negative returns over the period, amid increasing monetary policy concerns and persistent inflation dynamics. Sovereign yields, including US Treasury yields, German bund yields and UK government bond (Gilts) yields rose to multi-year highs and yield curves flattened as investors were increasingly concerned about the impact of tighter monetary policies on global growth prospects. Meanwhile, corporate bonds posted negative returns as credit spreads widened.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the year. Strategy selection in Europe and emerging market equities weighed on returns. In particular, the underlying European dynamic growth strategy detracted from performance due to its positioning in the information technology sector. The strategy that invests in Emerging Europe, Middle East and Africa weighed on returns in light of its positioning in the financials sector. Meanwhile, the exposure to the underlying Euro bond strategy added value on the back of favourable credit selection.

The fund follows a dynamic asset allocation model, which will consist of 100% cash at maturity. The monthly migration path towards the final portfolio is set to have an increasing exposure to bonds and cash, and a decreasing weight in equities over time until maturity. Over the period, the allocation to Europe, Japan and emerging market equities was reduced, while the position in Asia Pacific ex Japan equities was raised. Elsewhere, the exposure to cash and bonds was increased.

The emergence of more infectious variants of COVID-19 as well as a resurgence in infections also held back gains earlier in the period. Nevertheless, stock prices were supported by the economic reopening and recovery themes, while encouraging corporate earnings in developed markets, coupled with progress on the roll-out of COVID-19 vaccines globally, further lifted investor sentiment. Against this global backdrop, the UK outperformed other regional markets. From a sector perspective, energy companies rose as crude oil prices surged amid fears that the Russia-Ukraine conflict would disrupt energy supplies. Consumer staples, utilities and health care were also among the leading performers, while communication services and consumer discretionary names led the decliners.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the year. Strategy selection in Europe and emerging market equities weighed on returns. Manager's Overview

Global equities fell in US dollar terms but were up in euro and sterling terms over the review period. Tightening monetary policies in view of elevated inflation and geopolitical tensions amid Russia's attack on Ukraine weighed on markets in the latter part of the period. The emergence of more infectious variants of COVID-19 as well as a resurgence in infections also held back gains earlier in the period. Nevertheless, stock prices were supported by the economic reopening and recovery themes, while encouraging corporate earnings in developed markets, coupled with progress on the roll-out of COVID-19 vaccines globally, further lifted investor sentiment. Against this global backdrop, the UK outperformed other regional markets. From a sector perspective, energy companies rose as crude oil prices surged amid fears that the Russia-Ukraine conflict would disrupt energy supplies. Consumer staples, utilities and health care were also among the leading performers, while communication services and consumer discretionary names led the decliners.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the year. Strategy selection in Europe and emerging market equities weighed on returns. In particular, the underlying European dynamic growth strategy detracted from performance due to its positioning in the information technology sector. The strategy that invests in Emerging Europe, Middle East and Africa weighed on returns in light of its positioning in the financials sector. Meanwhile, the exposure to the underlying US value strategy added value on the back of favourable positioning in the health care and consumer staples sectors.

The fund follows a dynamic asset allocation model, which will consist of 100% cash at maturity. The monthly migration path towards the final portfolio is set to have an increasing exposure to bonds and cash, and a decreasing weight in equities over time until maturity. Over the period, the allocation to Europe, Japan and emerging market equities was reduced, while the position in Asia Pacific ex Japan equities was raised. Elsewhere, the exposure to cash was increased.

Manager's Overview

Global equities fell in US dollar terms but were up in euro terms over the review period. Tightening monetary policies in view of elevated inflation and geopolitical tensions amid Russia's attack on Ukraine weighed on markets in the latter part of the period. The emergence of more infectious variants of COVID-19 as well as a resurgence in infections also held back gains earlier in the period. Nevertheless, stock prices were supported by the economic reopening and recovery themes, coupled with progress on the roll-out of COVID-19 vaccines globally. Fixed income markets posted negative returns over the period, amid increasing monetary policy concerns and persistent inflation dynamics. Sovereign yields, including US Treasury yields, German bund yields and UK government bond (Gilts) yields rose to multi-year highs and yield curves flattened as investors were increasingly concerned about the impact of tighter monetary policies on global growth prospects. Meanwhile, corporate bonds posted negative returns as credit spreads widened.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the year. In particular, the exposure to the Fidelity emerging market strategy weighed on returns due to underlying security selection in the financials sector. This was partially offset by favourable positioning in consumer staples and health care. The allocation to the underlying euro short term bond strategy added value due to favourable term structure positioning. Elsewhere, the position in cash weighed on returns.

The fund follows a dynamic asset allocation model. The monthly migration path towards the final portfolio is set to have an increasing exposure to bonds and cash, and a decreasing weight in equities over time until maturity. In line with this, the majority of the fund's assets are invested in cash and highly liquid short-term bonds. The fund retains a marginal allocation to bonds and equities.

Manager's Overview

Global equities fell in US dollar terms but were up in euro terms over the review period. Tightening monetary policies in view of elevated inflation and geopolitical tensions amid Russia's attack on Ukraine weighed on markets in the latter part of the period. The emergence of more infectious variants of COVID-19 as well as a resurgence in infections also held back gains earlier in the period. Nevertheless, stock prices were supported by the economic reopening and recovery themes, coupled with progress on the roll-out of COVID-19 vaccines globally. Fixed income markets posted negative returns over the period, amid increasing monetary policy concerns and persistent inflation dynamics. Sovereign yields, including US Treasury yields, German bund yields and UK government bond (Gilts) yields rose to multi-year highs and yield curves flattened as investors were increasingly concerned about the impact of tighter monetary policies on global growth prospects. Meanwhile, corporate bonds posted negative returns as credit spreads widened.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the year. In particular, the exposure to the Fidelity emerging market strategy weighed on returns due to security selection in the financials sector. The underlying European dynamic growth strategy detracted from performance due to its positioning in the information technology sector. This was partially offset by the allocation to Fidelity Sustainable Research Enhanced US equity ETF (exchange-traded fund). The exposure to the underlying euro bond strategy added value due to favourable credit selection. Meanwhile, the Fidelity Asian high yield strategy weighed on returns. Elsewhere, favourable strategy selection within alternatives supported returns.

The fund follows a dynamic asset allocation model. The monthly migration path towards the final portfolio is set to have an increasing exposure to bonds and cash and a decreasing weight in equities over time until maturity. Over the period, the allocation to equities was reduced, while the exposure to bonds and cash was increased.

Meanwhile, corporate bonds posted negative returns as credit spreads widened.

The fund generated negative returns over the review period. The fund's investment process was evolved in May 2021 to meet the portfolio's defensive total return outcome. The fund does not use a comparative index for performance purposes. From the repurpose date to the end of April 2022, the Core component of the portfolio detracted from absolute returns. In particular, the allocation to investment grade fixed income suffered as a result of the rise in government bond yields and the widening of credit spreads. The Defensive component of the portfolio also ended lower. The Alpha component weighed on returns due to the allocation to the systematic global macro strategy. On a positive note, the exposure to commodities added value. The position in investment grade bonds within the Core and Defensive components was reduced over the period, while the allocation to the Alpha segment was increased to reduce the portfolio's correlation to markets.

Manager's Overview

Asian equities had a very volatile 12 months amid uncertainty around the COVID-19 situation, an earlier than expected increase in interest rates by the US Federal Reserve, and more recently, concerns surrounding the Russia-Ukraine conflict and its spill over effect on global markets. Against this backdrop, most countries and sectors in the region ended the period lower.

The fund delivered negative returns over the period. The long exposure to Wuxi Aptec, a China-based contract development manufacturing organisation (CDMO), was caught in a market wide sell-off. The Chinese health care sector came under pressure due to concerns over regulatory scrutiny resulting in standardised clinical trial practices and turmoil in the industry, while many of these stocks faced listing issues in the US – specially CDMO and contract research organisation (CRO) names. However, it is a long-term compounder that can benefit from increasing CRO demand both globally and in China. The position in LG Chemical also fell as the impact of rising oil prices on its petrochemical business and expectations of disappointing revenues over the coming quarters due to automobile chip shortages spooked investors. On a positive note, Indonesian lender Bank Central Asia advanced as market sentiment towards the state of the Indonesian economy improved, with banks seen as a proxy play on this. It has the best-in-class deposit franchise given its strong digital channel, strong capital position and improving asset quality trends.

This is a well-diversified fund that holds a similar number of long and short positions across the Asia ex Japan region. Built bottom-up, the fund focuses on maximising risk-adjusted returns. On the long side, the managers look for companies with prospects of high and sustainable returns, whose valuations do not reflect fundamentals. On the short side, they look for businesses where returns are unsustainably high, and valuations do not reflect deteriorating fundamentals. The fund's net exposure will stay in a range between +30% and -30% and maximum gross exposure is limited to 400%.

Manager's Overview

Global equities fell over the review period. Tightening monetary policies in view of elevated inflation and geopolitical tensions amid Russia's attack on Ukraine weighed on markets in the latter part of the period. Nevertheless, stock prices were supported by the economic reopening and recovery themes, while encouraging corporate earnings in developed markets, coupled with progress on the roll-out of COVID-19 vaccines globally, further lifted investor sentiment. Against this global backdrop, the UK outperformed other regional markets. From a sector perspective, energy companies rose as crude oil prices surged amid fears that the Russia-Ukraine conflict could disrupt energy supplies. Consumer staples, utilities and health care were also among the leading performers, while communication services and consumer discretionary names led the decliners.

The fund delivered positive returns over the period. Shares in financial technology company Envestnet rose on speculation over a private equity acquisition. The company is a market leader in the retail distribution of asset management/advisory products. Its platform continues to enhance gains, with new offerings in its insurance, credit and mortgage units. Clinical research organisation ICON added notable value. The company reported first quarter results that delivered revenues in line with expectations, while its earnings beat estimates. It is seeing a positive demand environment in development and backlog growth, which allowed it to reaffirm its FY22 guidance.

The fund is an equity market neutral strategy that aims to deliver strong risk adjusted performance with low correlation to equity markets. The portfolio managers follow a rigorous and repeatable investment process designed to consistently capture the highest conviction stock recommendations from Fidelity's research analysts globally, in a portfolio that minimises unintended factor or style biases. The managers ensure that only the highest quality and most relevant Fidelity analyst recommendations are included, and that stock selection is the primary driver of both risk and return. This investment approach aims to deliver strong long-term performance through the consistent capture of proprietary alpha from Fidelity's global team of fundamental analysts.

Manager's Overview

Global bond markets saw increased monetary policy concerns amid persistent inflation dynamics over the period. Global central banks embarked on a tightening cycle as inflation touched fresh multi-decade highs in the US, UK and eurozone, driven by a surge in food and energy prices. As a result, sovereign yields, including US Treasury yields, German bund yields and UK government bond (Gilts) yields rose to multi-year highs. Meanwhile, corporate bonds remained remarkably resilient for most of the period, amid an improvement in the growth outlook, rising COVID-19 vaccinations and strong corporate earnings. However, gains were offset by rising volatility related to China's property sector, supply chain constraints, the emergence of the Omicron variant of COVID-19, Russia's invasion of Ukraine and worries around the potential impact of monetary policy tightening.

The fund posted positive returns and outperformed the comparative index over the period. The discretionary part of the portfolio added value. Specifically, the long-short credit trades contributed to returns.

The fund invests across the full suite of fixed income markets, exploiting opportunities in credit, rates and currencies, with a focus on relative value and non-directional positions in order to limit market risk factors. The team employs discretionary strategies utilising the full breadth and global reach of Fidelity's investment capabilities. The fund aims to deliver a cash plus 2% return over rolling annual periods in a controlled risk environment, while aiming to generate alpha in different market environments with a focus on downside protection. The fund looks to benefit from rising volatility via strategies that can exploit these environments (such as long/short) and maintains a low correlation with traditional asset classes.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 28 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities fell in US dollar terms but were up in euro and sterling terms over the review period. Tightening monetary policies in view of elevated inflation and geopolitical tensions amid Russia's attack on Ukraine weighed on markets in the latter part of the period. The emergence of more infectious variants of COVID-19 as well as a resurgence in infections also held back gains earlier in the period. Nevertheless, stock prices were supported by the economic reopening and recovery themes, coupled with progress on the roll-out of COVID-19 vaccines globally. Fixed income markets posted negative returns over the period, amid increasing monetary policy concerns and persistent inflation dynamics. Sovereign yields, including US Treasury yields, German bund yields and UK government bond (Gilts) yields rose to multi-year highs and yield curves flattened as investors were increasingly concerned about the impact of tighter monetary policies on global growth prospects. Meanwhile, corporate bonds posted negative returns as credit spreads widened.

The fund generated positive returns over the review period. The Absolute Return Global Equity strategy supported performance, generating consistently positive returns over the period. In particular, shares in financial technology company Investnet rose on speculation over a private equity acquisition. Clinical research organisation ICON also added notable value. The fund was also supported by the holdings in Listed Alternatives, which rose. Conversely, the Systematic Global Macro strategy was the largest detractor from performance as it struggled amid dramatic market rotations. The allocation to US Treasury bills and an Asia-focussed absolute return strategy was reduced over the period, while the exposure to commodities and alternatives was increased.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 378 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Emerging market equities fell during the period. Markets were highly volatile due a number of factors, including the war in the Ukraine, China's regulatory crackdown, high global inflation and tighter financial conditions as the US Federal Reserve adopted a more aggressive stance. In early 2022, COVID-19 triggered lockdowns in China rattled investors given the perceived implications for both domestic and global economies. Russia's invasion of Ukraine drove inflation higher as commodity prices surged. From a style perspective, value names outperformed their growth and quality counterparts, though all of these stocks ended lower.

The fund posted negative returns and underperformed the comparative index over the year. At the country level, the overweight position in Russia hurt relative returns. At the sector level, financials holdings were the weakest performers. Sberbank of Russia and TCS Group Holding were negatively impacted by the sell-off in Russian equities. Conversely, copper holdings First Quantum Minerals and Grupo Mexico advanced on supportive commodity prices. Indian information technology (IT) services provider Infosys benefited from market share gains given its focused approach towards scaling its digital and cloud strategy. While China came under scrutiny, the fund's positioning in the market proved rewarding. As regulatory concerns rose, the lack of exposure to targeted industries such as private education and ecommerce proved rewarding.

The fund's country and sector positioning are a residual of the managers' bottom-up stock picking approach, where the most compelling opportunities are found. The managers continue to look for high return, capitalised businesses with under-levered balance sheets. Within IT, which is the largest sector overweight in the portfolio, industry leaders such as Taiwan Semiconductor Manufacturing (TSMC), Samsung Electronics and MediaTek are held. Financials remains a sector with significant exposure, comprising core positions in high quality financials such as HDFC Bank and AIA Group. The fund is overweight in materials, with a focus on companies with high quality assets, low-cost production and strong free-cashflow generation.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : EUR 779 MILLION

Manager's Overview

European markets declined (in US dollar terms) over the period. In the initial part of the period, a fall in new COVID-19 cases and an acceleration in vaccine rollouts buoyed equities. However, rising concerns around inflation, higher bond yields, supply chain bottlenecks and the impact of the Omicron variant of COVID-19 weighed on sentiment. Markets recovered in the second half of 2021, driven by strong quarterly earnings and increasing optimism over an economic recovery, but declined at the start of 2022 as geopolitical risks escalated sharply amid rising tensions between Russia and Ukraine. Risk aversion rose amid rising interest rate expectations to combat surging inflationary pressures, while China's stringent COVID-19 lockdown policy further dampened sentiment.

The fund generated positive returns but underperformed the index over the period, with sector and style headwinds weighing on relative returns. Weak stock selection in health care hampered performance. Health care equipment manufacturer Philips was the largest detractor from returns amid concerns surrounding the product recall on its DreamStation One sleep aid device. Not holding pharmaceuticals names Novo-Nordisk and AstraZeneca also held back relative gains. The positioning in consumer discretionary, coupled with the weaker performance of internet companies, including Prosus and Just Eat Takeaway, were other key detractors from returns. Some of these losses were offset by strong security selection in energy, particularly the position in Shell, which benefited from rising oil and gas prices.

The managers see opportunities in three main buckets. First, stocks with stable fundamentals that will keep growing and that are not too expensive in their view. Second, stocks where multiples are near trough and that already price in recession risks. And finally, stocks with more stable fundamentals that are also nearer trough multiples. Overall, the fund is moderately defensive and overweight in companies with more stable earnings. The managers are cautious of companies that are likely to see lower earnings over the next 1–3 years.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 147 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities performed positively (in EUR terms) as the ongoing economic recovery provided support. Encouraging corporate earnings in developed markets, coupled with progress on the roll-out of COVID-19 vaccines globally, further supported investor sentiment. However, as the emergence of more infectious variants of COVID-19 as well as a resurgence in infections held back gains. Tightening monetary policies in view of elevated inflation and geopolitical tensions amid Russia's attack on Ukraine also weighed on markets in the latter part of the period. Against this backdrop, the UK outperformed other regional markets. From a sector perspective, energy companies rose as crude oil prices surged amid fears that the Russia-Ukraine conflict could disrupt energy supplies. Consumer staples, utilities and health care were also among the leading performers, while communication services and consumer discretionary names led the decliners.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the period. While consumer discretionary and health care holdings held back gains, financials and industrials names buoyed performance. At a stock level, internet retail company Asos underperformed due to muted trading activity, as the COVID-19 uncertainty and inclement weather conditions hampered consumer demand. Altice USA declined amid concerns over increased competition and high penetration in the cable arena. Amazon.com came under pressure following disappointing quarterly earnings and a weaker than expected sales forecast. On a positive note, managed health care company UnitedHealth Group reported upbeat quarterly results due to strong growth in the Medicare advantage segment. Berkshire Hathaway contributed to returns following robust quarterly earnings, beating market expectations.

The new portfolio management team comprising Ashish Kochar and Oliver Trimmingham took over the management of the strategy on 15 September 2021. At a sector level, the fund has an overweight stance in high quality franchises across the information technology, industrials and financials sectors. At a stock level, diversified holding company Berkshire Hathaway is the top active position in the fund. US-based software company Microsoft remains a key active position within the technology domain.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : EUR 302 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities rose over the review period in sterling terms, but declined in the second half of the review period due to significant volatility. Tightening monetary policies in view of elevated inflation and geopolitical tensions amid Russia's attack on Ukraine weighed on markets in the latter part of the period. The emergence of more infectious variants of COVID-19 as well as a resurgence in infections held back gains earlier in the period. Nevertheless, stock prices were supported by the economic reopening and recovery themes, while encouraging corporate earnings in developed markets, coupled with progress on the roll-out of COVID-19 vaccines globally, lifted investor sentiment. Against this global backdrop, energy companies rose as crude oil prices surged amid fears that the Russia-Ukraine conflict could disrupt energy supplies. Consumer staples, utilities and health care were also among the leading performers, while communication services and consumer discretionary names led the decliners.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the period. The underweight allocation to the energy sector weighed on relative performance. The sector experienced a supply side shock as economic sanctions imposed on Russia raised concerns about disruptions to global energy markets. The positioning in the financials sector also detracted from returns. Performance in the sector was weighed down by expectations of tighter monetary policies to manage inflation, thus impacting credit growth expectations. On a positive note, the favourable positioning in the communication services sector supported returns.

Over the review period, the team added exposure to the consumer industries strategy. This was funded by selling the infrastructure strategy. Meanwhile, the allocation to cash was raised to increase the defensiveness of the strategy in light of market uncertainties and mounting risks.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2022 : USD 40 MILLION

Manager's Overview

US high yield markets posted negative returns as spreads widened over the period. 2021 will be remembered as another unprecedented year for global financial markets. In the wake of the COVID-19 pandemic, investors were catapulted into a new and uncharted world of record-high asset prices, diminishing policy support, secular structural changes and unforeseen macroeconomic surprises. An energy crisis in Europe and the emergence of a new COVID-19 variant added the final touches to what will go down as another very memorable year for financial investors. Coming into 2022, investor sentiment nosedived again amid heightened volatility driven primarily by the US Federal Reserve's hawkish policy pivot to increase the federal funds rate and begin quantitative tightening sooner and/or faster than initially anticipated. Growing geopolitical tensions between Russia and Ukraine further intensified the risk sentiment.

The fund posted negative returns and underperformed the index over the period. Lower coupon income held back relative gains, while credit selection and overall term structure positioning supported performance. The underweight allocation to communications and other financials were the primary contributors to performance. At an issuer level, holdings in Crestwood and CGG SA enhanced gains. The fund's tactical US dollar duration also supported returns.

The fund aims to maintain a relatively defensive credit exposure, with underweight positions in credit beta and spread duration versus the benchmark. The managers also maintain an underweight duration stance, acknowledging that duration is not really a big driver of alpha for the asset class and that interest rate volatility is likely to remain high. Despite value starting to emerge in the asset class, the managers remain cautious amid the deteriorating macroeconomic outlook. Sectors benefiting from the rise in commodity prices remain in favour. The managers are monitoring these areas carefully for a change in relative preferences given the risk of demand destruction, shifting capital allocation priorities and investor concentration.
