Quarterly fund commentary

During the third quarter of 2019 concerns about the global economy and expectations of further central bank easing helped government bond yields in many countries reach record lows. In August, for the first time, the 30-year German government bond yield fell below zero. Meanwhile, the yield of the 10-year US Treasury briefly fell below that of the 2-year US Treasury for the first time since 2007. This is seen by many as an indication of recession. The US Federal Reserve, as widely expected, cut US interest rates by 25bps. The European Central Bank (ECB) also eased policy. The measures announced included a cut in the deposit rate and a resumption of quantitative easing. The fund's largest allocation is to developed market government bonds. This exposure includes an allocation to US Treasury Inflation Protected Securities as well as conventional government bonds. In addition to this developed market exposure, around 9% of the fund is currently allocated to emerging market government bonds. To benefit from the additional yield available, we also have exposure to corporate bonds (predominately developed market with a small allocation to emerging market corporates). Our largest allocation within developed market corporate bonds is subordinated financials.

The Fund may invest in a dynamic way across assets/asset classes, which may result in periodic changes in the risk profile, underperformance and/or higher transaction costs. The fund may invest in distressed securities which carry a significant risk of capital loss. The fund may invest extensively in contingent convertible bonds which may result in significant risk of capital loss based on certain trigger events. Investments in debt instruments which are of lower credit quality may result in large fluctuations in the value of the fund.
