Objectives and Investment Policy

Objectives and Investment Policy

The Sub-Fund's objective is to generate absolute returns over market cycles by implementing a global macro strategy which seeks to benefit from macroeconomic themes across asset classes and regions. Strategies may include (i) macro strategies seeking to capture macroeconomic trends and exploit mispricings arising from divergence between economic fundamentals and political and policy actions; (ii) quantitative strategies aiming to identify leading macro drivers; (iii) strategies seeking to apply a value approach to purchasing and selling options; and (iv) strategies which combine any of the previous approaches. The Investment Manager implements its strategy by investing in various asset classes (including equities, fixed income, currencies, commodities and volatility) and markets (including developed and emerging markets); mainly through financial derivative instruments. It can also invest in A shares (issued by mainland China-based companies) through the Shanghai-Hong Kong Stock Connect (Stock Connect). The sub-fund may be net long or short.

What does it mean?

This indicator (SRRI) represents the annualized historical volatility of the Sub-Fund over a 5-year period. Where there are less than 5 years worth of data, missing returns are simulated using an appropriate benchmark. The SRRI may change over time and should not be used as an indicator of future risk or returns. Even the lowest risk classification does not imply that the Sub-Fund is risk-free or that capital is necessarily guaranteed or protected.

Category

The Sub-Fund invests in various asset classes, taking long and short positions mainly through financial derivative instruments.

Are there any other particular risks?

The following risks may be materially relevant but may not always be adequately captured by the synthetic risk indicator and may cause additional loss:

- Risks linked to the use of derivatives and financial techniques: Derivatives and other financial techniques used substantially to obtain, increase or reduce exposure to assets may be difficult to value, may generate leverage, and may not yield the anticipated results. All of this could be detrimental to fund performance.
- Model Risk: Models may be misspecified, badly implemented or may become inoperative when significant changes take place in the financial markets or in the organization. Such a model could unduly influence portfolio management and expose to losses.
- Financial, economic, regulatory and political risks: Financial instruments are impacted by various factors, including, without being exhaustive, the development of the financial market, the economic development of issuers who are themselves affected by the general world economic situation, and economic, regulatory and political conditions prevailing in the relevant country.

For more details about risk, see section 5 "Risk Factors" of the prospectus.
