Quarterly fund commentary

Global stocks continued to climb throughout the third quarter and were mostly lifted by US stocks, particularly technology companies. On the other hand, the energy sector faced challenges and continued its year-to-date struggles as Brent oil prices dipped back towards US$40 a barrel on concerns over slowing global demand. Technology stocks also gave up some ground in September following their stellar performances since mid-March. In terms of economic data, momentum in the recovering US labour market appeared to stall as worries about new containment measures increased. For Europe, the data points to a two-speed economy with manufacturing continuing its strong recovery, while services have stalled under pressure from lockdown measures and restrictions as coronavirus cases continue to rise. At the end of the quarter, our assessment of global equities is moderately positive leaving the equity allocation at around 58%. On the fixed income side, we largely maintained our position. Within the equity portion we are looking for a tilt towards lower volatility stocks while at the same time enhancing factor exposures like Quality, Value, and Momentum.

The Fund may invest in a dynamic way across assets/asset classes, which may result in periodic changes in the risk profile, underperformance and/or higher transaction costs. The fund may invest in distressed securities which carry a significant risk of capital loss. The fund may invest extensively in contingent convertible bonds which may result in significant risk of capital loss based on certain trigger events.
