Approach and Style

Performance over month in USD (%)

Fund	8.2
Market index	8.4

S&P 500 (N)

Angel Agudo looks to invest in companies that are undervalued, either because they are out of favour or little value is given to their recovery potential. When investing, the potential downside risk of a company is taken into account, with a strong balance sheet or resilient business model resulting in stronger conviction and a higher weighting. Angel runs a relatively concentrated portfolio with a low level of turnover and some value characteristics.

Market index is for comparative purposes only.

These figures relate to the fund's past performance, which is not a reliable indicator of future results. The value of investments and any income from them may go down as well as up and an investor may not get back the amount invested. Source of fund performance is Fidelity. Basis: nav-nav with gross income reinvested, in USD, net of fees. Other share classes may be available. Please refer to the prospectus for more details.

Market Environment

US markets staged a strong recovery through October, as concerns around the Chinese slowdown diminished and corporate earnings results in the US were better than expected. The S&P 500 registered its largest monthly gain in four years. Recent monetary policy easing moves in China and Europe allowed the US Federal Reserve (Fed) to focus on domestic data rather than on external factors, removing one of the key barriers to raising interest rates in the near future. In its October statement, the Fed unexpectedly said that it would determine "whether it will be appropriate to raise the target range at its next meeting". At a sector level, materials, energy and information technology outperformed the market. Materials stocks advanced on the back of another rate cut in China, whereas, energy and health care stocks benefited from encouraging earnings reports. Meanwhile, defensive sectors, including utilities and consumer staples underperformed the broader market.

Fund Performance

The fund recorded positive returns but slightly lagged the index during the month. US markets staged a strong recovery through October, as concerns around the Chinese slowdown diminished and corporate earnings results in the US were better than expected. While some of our key holdings made a significant contribution to returns, stock specific factors held back selected holdings and this had a negative impact on relative performance. At a stock level, notable contributors included aerospace & defence group L-3 Communications, which reported third-quarter earnings well ahead of consensus analysts' estimates. Industrial conglomerate General Electric (GE) was another key contributor; its shares rose following news that activist investor Nelson Peltz's fund bought a $2.5 billion stake in the company, adding fresh pressure to pull off GE's plan to shift away from finance operations toward its core industrial businesses. Among others, the holding in communications equipment group Juniper Networks added value after it announced strong quarterly results. On the downside, selected holdings in the consumer sector, notably electronics retailer Best Buy and Wal-Mart Stores, were among the key detractors. Shares in the former had a strong run in the previous two months, while a decline in annual profit held back the holding in Wal-Mart.

Fund Positioning

The fund is overweight in the industrials and information technology (IT) sectors. I found a few interesting opportunities in the industrials sector, although not all of them are typical industrials stocks. Some key holdings include L-3 Communications, a prime contractor in aerospace systems and national security solutions and Dun & Bradstreet, a data and analytics services provider. United Parcel Service, one of the world's largest package delivery companies and a provider of supply chain management solutions, is also a key position in the portfolio. Within IT, the largest exposure is to software companies, including software giant Oracle, and voice and language solutions provider Nuance. In recent months, the manager has reduced the allocation to health care while maintaining the overall overweight stance in the sector. Within health care, the fund's current exposure is geared towards quality pharmaceuticals firms. Pharmaceuticals company Pfizer is a key position in the portfolio given its limited downside and underappreciated pipelines.

Attribution

Performance attribution is produced in the currency shown below. For funds with multiple share classes, the attribution return reflects the aggregate performance across all the share classes. It may therefore deviate from the published return for a particular share class. When using the analysis for hedged share classes, please consider that the attribution is shown before the impact of hedging.

The contributions shown in the tables are before the impact of charges. If charges are applied, their effect is captured in the "Other" category in the tables and will also be reflected in the fund return.

All investments, including derivatives, linked to a particular issuing company have been combined to form a total percentage for each issuing company.

The sector/industry and country contribution tables (where relevant) display a maximum of ten individual sectors/industries or countries. For funds investing in more than ten sectors/industries or countries, only top five and bottom five are listed, with the contribution from other sectors/industries or countries shown in the "Other Sectors" or "Other Countries" category.

Important Information

Before investing you should read the Key Investor Information Document (KIID). Details of where the KIID is available are on the last page of this factsheet. The value of investments and any income from them may go down as well as up and an investor may not get back the amount invested. Where an investor's own currency is different to the currency of the fund's investments, the fund's returns can be affected by fluctuations in currency exchange rates. The use of financial derivative instruments may result in increased gains or losses within the fund.

Fidelity International refers to the group of companies which form the global investment management organisation that provides information on products and services in designated jurisdictions outside of North America.
