CHAIRMAN'S STATEMENT

During the six months to 30 June 2019 Temple Bar generated a total return on net assets of 11.9%, slightly underperforming the benchmark FTSE All-Share Index total return of 13.0%, as the Value investment style that your managers pursue remained out of fashion.

Dividend

A first quarterly dividend of 11.0p per share was paid on 28 June 2019 and the Directors have declared a second interim dividend, also of 11.0p per share, again an increase of 25.7% on the equivalent dividend last year. This will be paid on 30 September 2019 to those shareholders on the register of members as at 13 September 2019. The ex-dividend date for this payment is 12 September 2019. It is important to reiterate the comment made in the announcement of the first interim payment that the scale of the increase relative to the prior year should not be taken as indicative of the likely increase in the dividend for the year as a whole. The large increase in the interim payments reflects a rebalancing exercise between the size of the three interim payments and the final dividend. In the absence of any unforeseen circumstances the Board is hoping to recommend an increase in the total dividend for the year of approximately 10%.

Board

The process of Board refreshment has continued and as from 1st October Sonita Alleyne and Shefaly Yogendra will be joining the Board. Sonita has extensive experience in both public and private sectors, particularly in media and Shefaly brings a wealth of expertise in digital and tech leadership, risk and decision making. I am sure both these new Directors will bring interesting new perspectives to our discussions. As previously announced, Sir Richard Jewson will not be offering himself for re-election at the next AGM.

Investment Parameters

As highlighted in the Annual Report, we have been having discussions, both internally and with shareholders, re any modifications to our investment parameters. These discussions are ongoing. In the meantime, I would like to thank the many shareholders and other interested parties who have responded thus far.

Outlook

Future movement of UK share prices remain linked to the outcome of the Brexit discussions and global instability. We have no special insight into their likely resolution. However, over many years Temple Bar has demonstrated resilience in even the most difficult of markets. We will endeavour to continue to do so.

MANAGER'S REPORT

Global equity markets bounced strongly in the first half of the year. The FTSE All-Share Index delivered an impressive total return of 13.0% over the first six months of 2019, although this was well behind some other major markets. The superior performance of Growth over Value continued as investors took note of deteriorating economic data and moved (further) from cyclical shares to (perceived) safety. This continued to impact the Temple Bar portfolio given its distinctive Value investment approach and it slightly underperformed its benchmark, returning 11.9% over the same six month period.

A major detractor from performance was Capita – a combination of underperformance and its meaningful portfolio weighting. Capita's operational recovery is still in its infancy so we are not surprised the market is pricing in little optimism, but in this instance much of the share price weakness seems due to a high-profile seller in the last six months. Other weak portfolio performers were Marks & Spencer, which surprised the market with the announcement of a joint venture with Ocado, a rights issue and a dividend cut, easyJet which is experiencing a lull in demand in a market with excess supply, Countrywide, the estate agent suffering from the low level of housing transactions in the UK market (not helped by a weak balance sheet) and BT with investors believing any profits will be required to finance the pension fund deficit and pay for future capital expenditure as it rolls out its fibre network.

Some improvement in the repair, maintenance and improvement market drove good results and strong share price performance from Travis Perkins and Grafton. Avon Products received a bid from its rival Natura, Forterra continued to benefit from a UK brick market with no excess supply and Citigroup comfortably passed its stress test with the Federal Reserve, consequently enabling it to return more capital to shareholders.

The discussion on the merits of Value investing continue with several commentators asking whether the style has seen its best days. We continue to argue that the major reason for Value's underperformance is the weak economic recovery of the last decade combined with the very low level of bond yields. Whilst it has admittedly lasted a long time we believe this is just another cycle and that interest rates will eventually revert to more normal levels.

Unfortunately, neither we (nor anyone else) can provide any catalysts or timing for this reversal and thus most investors prefer to run with the momentum behind companies exhibiting growth, but high valuations. We still believe this could ultimately prove to be a dangerous strategy, particularly if interest rates reverse quickly.

With economic news deteriorating there appears little intuitive sense to moving back into more cyclical companies now, but history informs us that these shares often bounce very sharply before there is any supporting evidence. We believe that several shares already more than discount an economic slowdown, but that investors are reluctant to think more than one step ahead and consider how the financial authorities will react to such a development. We expect to see 'shock and awe' policies with more emphasis than previously on fiscal policy (i.e. increased government spending) than monetary policy (interest rate cuts).

The same conclusion holds for Brexit. The political outlook and its effect on the UK economy remains as hazy as it has been since the EU referendum. But the more extreme the Brexit (if it happens), the more likely that policy action will be implemented to offset the worst outcomes.

Continued share price weakness allowed us to increase holdings in Kingfisher, easyJet and McCarthy & Stone. We participated in a secondary issuance of shares by Hipgnosis, the music royalty company, added to the position we had built at the end of 2018 in fashion retailer Superdry and purchased an old favourite J Sainsbury. The latter's shares fell significantly post the collapsed merger with Asda leaving it, in the market's eyes, vulnerable to a squeeze from its larger and/or cheaper competitors. Its valuation is, however, very low and discounts an uncomfortable future.

We sold completely our holdings in Drax and Go-Ahead which had both reached our target prices, sold Avon Products (after the period end) following the bid it received and reduced the holding in HSBC post its out-performance of its banking peers.

There is no doubt that Value investors worldwide feel battered and bruised. However, there are a number of factors which suggest that current investment conditions are not particularly rational – over $12 trillion of negative yielding government debt, an IPO market in the USA mainly bringing loss-making companies to the market, extraordinarily high valuations for companies perceived as high-growth prospects, the introduction of new strange accounting concepts (such as WeWork's 'community-adjusted EBITDA'), a significant increase in low quality corporate debt, a lowering of quality control by rating agencies and claims that this time really is different (low bond yields, low inflation, the death of Value and so on) all bring echoes of 1999. We remain fully invested in Value opportunities, but with some protection afforded by our holdings of gold and silver.
