In terms of import and export data, exports in US dollars in June accounted for 0.5% year-on-year, previous data was -3.3%, while imports was 2.7% percent year-on-year, increased slightly. The total amount of newly-added social financing in June was 1.80 trillion Yuan, contained the municipal bond, and the social financing amounted to 3.43 trillion Yuan.

From the begin of July, the current economy is very close to the normal range at the aggregate level, short-term countercyclical policies may quickly return to normal. The interest rate went up steadily in July. The pace of monetary policy to extend credit may slow down, and the monetary policy may gradually return to normalcy.

July market review: The bond market went up first and went down in the late July on mixed news including premarket monetary policy expectations, the rollover of medium-term lending facilities (MLF) at a smaller size, bull market in stock market and the China and US trade war, which worked together to disturb the bond market yield. The interest rate line flatten and went up, The credit spread squeezed, and the interest rate curve steepen.

Fund Strategy

Over the month, bought the high quality short term credit bonds, and some convertible bond, the portfolio duration shorten and decreased some holdings of MMF and Chinese USD bond to gain the On and off shore spread.

Market Outlook

Next month, we will continue to take a conservative strategy. We will increase the credit bond and convertible bond positions to gain the holding period returns, buy the RMB mutual fund, increase overall absolute returns, and be on the look-out for investing opportunities in stocks and convertible bonds.

*The Credit Rating for convertible bonds is not included.
