▲ Manager's Comment

Not much to update on economic front. New data seem to confirm the view of a peaked-out economic recovery in China post covid-19 pandemic. Domestic demand remains muted whereas export is still strong. Good global PMI data probably point to a sustainable export strength throughout the rest of the year. PPI in March comes in at 4.4%, well above expected 3.3%. CPI also surprises to the upside. This is the latest confirmation of simmering inflation pressure in the economy. PBoC, after marginally tightening for three quarters, stays put for the time being.
