Report of the Manager to the Unitholders

New Capital Asia Future Leaders Fund Markets

MSCI AC Asia ex Japan USD TR was up 2.87% in the 6 months ending Dec 2023. China/HK continued to be the weakest market with continued pressure from the property sector along with the related weakness in consumer confidence. India continued to be the strongest market in the period, as economic strength was witnessed across the broad, with a strong property cycle, robust public spending and a renewed private sector capital expenditure cycle. Korea and Taiwan markets also outperformed 2H 2023 as the IT cycle recovery continued particularly in areas such as memory benefitting Samsung Electronics and Hynix. Artificial Intelligence ("AI") names consolidated in 2H 2023 after a strong first half.

Positioning

The fund underperformed the benchmark about 3.5% in the second half 2023. Growth style in Asia in that period continued to underperform, particularly in China as foreign investors kept selling down positions that typically are more invested in growth stocks. Dividend yield was the best performing factor in Asia driven by China as investors who were negative on the economy fled to defensive stocks. In the period we did not take big active positions in country or sector given low conviction of the balance between valuations and fundamental trends ie in India where the former is high and latter strong vs. China the opposite. We have trimmed Financials due to peaked interest rates and asset quality that are near historical best levels in markets such as India and Indonesia. North Asia banks such as Hong Kong also are tied to US rates that have peaked along with poor loan growth. We continue to have broad based exposure in India across Industrials, Healthcare and Consumer. In Taiwan we have reasonable AI exposure which continues to have better trends vs non AI demand trends.

Outlook

The rotation in South Korea into low price/book stocks with typically low return on equity (low quality) does pose a short and perhaps longer term risk to quality growth investing in the market. The viable options are outside HoldCo companies within areas of auto and financials as well as materials. Autos however are coming off a high base of global volume growth, for example Kia volume growth has tapered off in recent months to low single digits and margins at risk from rising incentives which remaining far below historic levels. Industry pricing competition remains an overhang. Within Korea banks, the populist government policies are largely against such institutions, encouraging competition from digital players and capping loan interest rates to protect small home and business owners. Korea is also undergoing a weakening asset quality cycle particularly from the housing market. For chemical and steel companies, cyclical trends remain with no recovery. To follow the rotation would be at odds for most stocks with fundamental trends at least in the short term. In India there continues to be a strong increase in foreign selling after such strong market run up. High expectations are now being met with a slight easing in bottom up trends across the board off a high base. Banks suffered in the month as net margins started to taper off due to high competition for deposits on tight liquidity and select lenders also noted a weakening in asset quality within riskier areas. Property sales remain strong but dwindling landbanks are now causing some to raise capital for further growth. Cement and steel volume is slowing and the leading construction contractor keeps reporting negative growth in domestic orders. What is clear is the tide is beginning to slowly subside and no longer lift all boats and it is now becoming much more of a traditional stock pickers market vs sectoral and thematic focus. In China we remain neutral and focus on companies that can grow regardless of macro conditions such as weakened consumer sentiment. Gaming and online education companies are examples of such and within consumer we still have a preference for the EV (electric vehicle) sector because unlike other consumer areas, price deflation (cuts) are at least stimulating volume elasticity due to the increasing value for money proposition with ever advancing advanced driver assistance system ("ADAS") technology. We also like online travel as there has been a uptick in international travel recently in part due to more relaxed visa thresholds for China tourists in various ASEAN markets. Reported revenue trends -25% quarter on quarter given the drop in demand for non Al servers.

New Capital Wealthy Nations Fixed Maturity Bond Fund 2024

The Fund USD Ord ACC Class returned +2.79% for the period July-December 2023. Carry was the main contributor to performance during the period, however spread and rates also added to performance. Looking at interest rates, during the last six months of the year 2023 the whole curve tightened with the 6 months US Treasuries squeezing 20bp in the period

Within the Fund, all except one bond showed positive returns. Goldman Sachs, Sasol and Export Import Bank of India leading the list with strong carry and spread tightening. The small position in Shimao Group Holdings Ltd 6.125% 21Feb2024 was the only one bond that detracted from performance, costing 5bp in the last 6 months. The bond is now valued at $4.56 as of end of December 2023 and only represents 0.06% of the Fund.

The Fund has 3 months left to maturity and we believe it has still a good carry profile with very limited exposure to credit risk.

New Capital All The B's Rated Fixed Maturity Bond Fund 2025

In 2023 the "All The Bs" USD ordinary accumulating share class returned +5.34%. Since inception the fund is down -8.67%.

Since inception we have seen stress and defaults in three parts of the portfolio;

- 1. Chinese real estate At the launch of the fund we had around 10% invested in Chinese real estate. Given the downturn in the space due to economic and regulatory issues, we have seen the bonds trade down materially. We have exited most of these positions, mostly at stressed and distressed prices. The portfolio now includes three Chinese real estate names, which accounts for 0.25% of the overall NAV. We continue to hold these bonds as they are trading distressed with all the bad news priced in.
- 2. Russia At the start of the fund we had around 3-4% of the portfolio invested in Russia. Specifically we were invested in high quality Russian names, notably; Sberbank, VEB bank, and Gazprom. With the outbreak of the Russia-Ukraine war, and the sanctions the west imposed against Russia, we were forced to sell these companies at distressed prices.
- 3. Credit Suisse At the inception of the fund around 1.5% of the portfolio was invested in Credit Suisse AT1s. We own AT1s in the portfolio as a means to enhance yield, whereby up to 20% of the portfolio can be invested in AT1's and corporate hybrids. With the failure of Credit Suisse, the AT1s effectively traded to zero overnight and we were forced to exit as the remaining value was only in a litigation claim which would likely extend well beyond the life of the fund.

Currently, the portfolio is highly diversified, with a total of 103 different issuers in the portfolio. The portfolio is biased towards higher quality, with around 70% of the portfolio invested in BBB or higher companies (of note < 10% of the portfolio is invested in ratings higher than BBB), 25% invested in BB rated companies, and only 6% of the portfolio is invested in single-B rated companies. Within the single-B rating category, 70% of the single-Bs are developed market which are less risky by nature given the political and economic stabile countries in which they operate. The portfolio currently yields around 6.99%. Excluding non-performing bonds (i.e. bonds with a spread greater than 1000) the yield to maturity is 6.07%.

Around 48% of the portfolio is invested in bonds with maturities greater than the maturity of the fund. However, 21% will mature before the end of 2026, and as such either the bond will by then if it has a call feature as most high yield bonds do, or the bond will be trading close to par given the short maturity left. 13% is in AT1s and corporate hybrids, where we expect most of these will be called at first call date either due to economic, reputational or rating agency reasons. Of the remaining maturities that accounts for 14% of the portfolio we are fairly confident that these bonds will trade close to par as they get closer to maturity and are mostly investment grade by nature. In addition, with the expectation that interest rates will be going down as either inflation risks fade or we enter a hard landing, by having more bonds in longer maturities, we benefit from potential upside in price movement in a move towards lower interest rates.
